CHARTER ADDS UP TO ALLIANCE OF THE BIG FIVE

U.S. to Bear Brunt of World Police

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., June 17—As the drafting of the charter of the new league of nations nears completion in the international security conference it becomes more and more apparent that what is emerging at San Francisco is a military, political and economic alliance of the five great powers—the United States, Great Britain, Russia, France, and China—to dominate the world and to preserve peace, if possible.

[New soviet protest to curb powers of general assembly of projected world organization brings parley's work to a standstill. Story on page 9.]

Inasmuch as France and China are far from first class powers in military strength it is really an alliance of the Big Three—the United States, Great Britain, and Russia. The Big Three will preserve peace so long as their combined military power is greater than that of any other group of nations and so long as they hang together. If the Big Three should fall apart, another world war would be in the making.

Voluminous Document

The charter of the new league provides an elaborate plan to preserve peace by pacific measures, if possible, by force, if necessary, and a plan of international coöperation to influence social and economic changes in the member nations. The new league is being built on the general lines of the old league brought into being by Woodrow Wilson, but in the new organization the great nations will have more power, the small nations less.

The charter is a voluminous and intricate document combining idealistic aspirations for banishing war from this globe with a multitude of ingeniously contrived escape clauses to protect the policies and interests of the 50 member nations but particularly the Big Five from too damaging an impact with lofty conceptions of human welfare. The interpretation of these exceptions and exemptions already is providing occupation for Philadelphia lawyers.

United States Has Least Say

In the Big Three alliance the United States is to have the least voice and is to make the largest contribution of military and economic power. The United States will have one vote in the new league's general assembly, Russia three, and the British empire six, as will be detailed in a succeeding article.

Adm. Hepburn, United States navy consultant to the American delegation, estimated last week that one-third of the United States

TRUE AMERICAN HAILS FROM MIDDLE WEST, BRITISH WRITER FINDS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, June 17—The true American comes from the middle west, a prominent British journalist and historian said today in an article praising Gen. Eisenhower. Writing in the Sunday Chronicle, Wickham Steed said:

"In delighting to honor the supreme allied commander, Gen. Eisenhower, [with the freedom of the city] the city of London was honoring a man from Kansas and Texas, a typical American. Such men are not always found on the Atlantic seaboard or in the country west of the Rockies. What's more, large numbers of American citizens in the east and west often misjudge their fellow countrymen in the middle west and attribute to them notions and ideas that are wide of the mark.

"I never feel I am quite in America until I have gone beyond the Mississippi, and in no part of the United States have I met finer men and women or been more at my ease."

POLISH GROUP FACES TRIAL IN MOSCOW TODAY

BY EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, June 17 (AP)—A group of Poles, including Gen. Bronislaw Okulicki, will go on trial tomorrow on charges of committing diversionary acts behind the Red army lines in Poland, and there were indications today the death penalty may be asked in some cases.

While Russian courts were preparing to handle this particular problem, initial conversations already had taken place between Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, former Polish premier in London, and other Polish groups, aimed at forming a Polish provisional government along the lines set down by the Crimean conference.

Special passes were issued today to soviet and foreign correspondents, permitting them to attend "the sittings of the military collegium of the supreme court of the U. S. S. R. in the trial of Okulicki and others." Representatives of foreign missions in Moscow were invited to attend.

Number Not Indicated

Sixteen Poles were arrested by the Russians, but it was not specified whether all would go on trial. The trial will take place at the Dom Suyozov, the house of the labor unions, sometimes referred to as the hall of columns.

Because committing acts of diversion is a serious charge the prosecutor for the Red army may demand heavy penalties, it was said. The alleged acts were committed before the war ended, it was pointed out.

Vasily V. Ulrich, president of the military collegium of the supreme court, who presided at the last purge trials, may direct the proceedings tomorrow.

Reports in responsible circles said that "startling evidence" would be presented against Okulicki, and that the Red army had amassed much evidence of terroristic and diversionist activity against the accused. These circles said the Poles will be charged with being in possession of radio sets with which they kept in constant contact with the London exile government.

Optimistic Over Parley

Diplomatic observers, meanwhile, expressed optimism over the result of initial discussions held by Mikolajczyk and Jan Stanczyk, Socialist miners' leader from London with representatives of the Warsaw government and other groups from Poland.

These observers said they were impressed with the "seriousness with which all the factions viewed the current question."

After the discussions are concluded the various factions will report to the commission composed of Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov, United States Ambassador Harriman, and the British envoy, Archibald Clark Kerr.

Detroiters Cross River to Eat Meat in Windsor

Detroit, Mich., June 17 (AP)—Meat hungry Detroiters swarmed to Windsor, Ont., across the river today, because of the barren butcher shops and limited cafe menus in their own town.

Hotels and cafes in Windsor handled virtually endless crowds of Detroiters over the week-end. Customs officials reported 12,000 cars entered Windsor in 48 hours.

U.S. Orders: Trucks Must Move Today

After a conference between Maj. Gen. David McCoach, commanding general of the 6th service command, and Ellis T. Longenecker, federal manager of the truck lines seized under Presidential order, it was made clear that the trucks will operate today—either with civilian drivers or soldiers at the wheel.

Maj. Gen. David McCoach

The army was bringing in additional troops, including thousands of skilled and experienced truck drivers. It expected to have 5,000 troops available for strike duty here by tomorrow night.

Possible Draft Action

Longenecker said that names of striking drivers will be turned over to their draft boards for possible reclassification and army induction.

The strike tied up a quantity of perishable food and war materials. Some 200 tons of freight was tied up at the Plaza Express company, 1006 W. 21st st., Robert Gerstein, manager, reported. This tonnage included 50,000 pounds of perishable food.

A similar situation was reported at the Fred Olson & Son Motor Service company, 4724 Walton st., where 400 tons of freight was left on the docks and in trailers, of which 85 per cent was essential war material.

10,000 Drivers Involved

Federal control now covers all trucking companies which have agreements with the independent Chicago Truck Drivers union or the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, local 705, or their "affiliates." Only members of these two unions are participating in the walkout, which involves an estimated 10,000 drivers.

The strike, a recurrence of a walkout last month, is in protest against a war labor board award of $4.08 weekly pay increase for a 51 hour week, instead of the $5 increase for a 48 hour week demanded by the unions.

The Teamsters Joint council 25 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters [AFL] will meet at 9 a. m. today at 639 S. Ashland blvd., said Henry Burger, international organizer, to pledge the council's support to the army and the ODT.

MRS. EISENHOWER, WAITING, IS NERVOUS AS WIFE OF ANY YANK

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—Vivacious, dark haired Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower was as nervous today as the wife of any returning GI.

"Wives of service men know how I feel," she remarked as she prepared to greet tomorrow her soldier whom she hasn't seen for a year and a half, before his successful invasion of Normandy.

Mrs. Eisenhower

"It's so hard to express my deep happiness after the chaos of the last years," she said. "I'm kind of numb, and I can't put into words just how I feel."

CIO UNION CALLS 16,700 ON STRIKE IN TIRE PLANTS

Akron, O., June 17 [Special]—The three Akron plants of the Goodyear Rubber company, which have been producing 16,000 tires and 16,000 tubes each 24 hours, were shut down tight today by a strike of 16,700 production employes, members of the CIO United Rubber Workers' union.

Company officials said that between 4,000 and 5,000 office workers have been instructed not to report for work tomorrow. The walkout followed two weeks of union-management negotiations begun after production workers sanctioned a strike May 28 in balloting under terms of the Smith-Connolly act.

Grievances listed by the union include charges that the company has refused to bargain in good faith, has stalled on grievance procedure, and has "chiseled" on wage rates.

Capital Plans Crowded Day for Gen. Ike

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—Final details of Gen. Eisenhower's reception tomorrow in flag bedecked Washington were disclosed today.

The general and his official party of 53 are scheduled to arrive at the National airport across the Potomac at 10 a. m. [All times mentioned are Chicago time.] The army schedule calls for the last propeller of his 100 plane bomber and fighter escort to be stopped 15 minutes later. Gen. Marshall, chief of staff, will greet Eisenhower as he steps down from his plane, flying in from Paris by way of Bermuda.

[Gen. Eisenhower arrived in Bermuda yesterday for a brief rest before proceeding to the United States.]

The army band will give an official musical welcome.

Parade to Pentagon

Then will start the parade around the bend of the Potomac to the war department building. The general's motorcade will enter the inner court of the Pentagon thru a tunnel and he will be met there by War Secretary Stimson.

Leaving the Pentagon, the party will enter Washington over the Memorial bridge, circle the Lincoln memorial and proceed to the Capitol over Constitution and Pennsylvania avs.

Gen. Eisenhower will halt momentarily at 14th and Pennsylvania to pick up the keys of the city, presented by the president of the District of Columbia board of commissioners.

Address to Joint Session

At 11:30 a. m. the general will address a joint session of congress in the house chamber.

The parade will resume, back down Constitution and Pennsylvania avs. to the Statler hotel, where the general, his party, and their relatives will be guests of the District of Columbia at a luncheon.

President Truman will greet Eisenhower for the first time of the day at 1:30 p. m. at the White House. Rushing on to a 2:30 p. m. news conference at the Pentagon, the general will be free afterward to rest until 6:30 p. m., when he will set forth again for the White House to eat a buffet supper with the President.

The Eisenhower party will fly to New York Tuesday, leaving the airport here at 7 a. m.

ROAR GREETING TO BLACKHAWK DIVISION IN N. Y.

CHICAGOANS BACK
Names of Chicago area soldiers returning with the 86th division appear on page 24.

BY CHARLES GOTTHART

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Camp Kilmer, N. J., June 17—This is a whistle stop on the long road to Tokyo for the 14,289 officers and men of the 86th [Blackhawk] division who began streaming into Camp Kilmer today after a tumultuous welcome in New York harbor. The division includes 700 men from the Chicago area.

Gen. Melasky

After 30 day furloughs at home, most of them will be redeployed into the Pacific. Few qualify for discharge under the army's point system.

The soldiers who fought in Germany as part of Gen. Patton's 3d army were under showers and then given fresh uniforms here soon after their arrival on four troop transports, the James Parker, General Brooke, General Bliss, and Marine Fox. The Chicagoland men will be on their way to Camp Grant, Ill., tomorrow. Their furloughs will follow.

Greeted by Whistles

Passing ships and small harbor craft set up a din of whistles when the troopships pulled into New York harbor. Bands played their welcome, a navy blimp circled overhead, and pretty girls jitterbugged on the deck of the army's "welcome home ship," the Q-200, former yacht of the late Charles R. Walgreen of Chicago.

The cutter, Sandy Hook, with newsmen aboard, circled about the troopships as the camera men photographed the men lining the rails, and the USA Capt. William Cassidy plied in and out. It carried War Undersecretary Patterson who later delivered an official welcome to the 86th's commander, Maj. Gen. Harris M. Melasky of Austin, Tex.

Army and WAC bands gave forth with additional welcoming music at the piers as the ships were berthed.

"What town is this?" some of the veterans shouted.

"Where are the girls?" and "Where is the beer?" they wanted to know.

The men were loaded aboard ferries, carried across the Hudson to waiting troop trains, and deposited here with a speed that convinced skeptical GIs that army red tape had really been cut.

Brief Stay in Camp

At the camp the men were marched to barracks they will occupy for the 24 to 36 hours before they start for army reception stations nearest their homes. There are 20 of these thruout the country. Later, those slated for Pacific service will reassemble at Camp Gruber, Okla.

After a brief orientation talk by Camp Kilmer officers, the men sat down to a meal that included steak, ice cream, and milk. Then they lined up for summer uniforms and were able to put aside the heavy clothing they wore in Germany.

The men were cautioned against inviting relatives here to see them, for visitors are not permitted at the camp and the short stay and jammed travel conditions would thwart efforts to make the trip.

First man to debark from the General Bliss was Brig. Gen. Einer B. Ojelsteem of Menominee, Mich., who said, "We had a fine crossing."

Surprise Raid Catches Areas with Lights On

GUAM, June 18 [Monday]—(AP)—Approximately 450 Super Fortresses blasted four Japanese cities of less than 200,000 population each with incendiary bombs today and caught the Japanese so by surprise that not only all of Kagoshima was brightly lighted but its naval anchorage, too, was aglow.

Returning B-29 crew members said smoke from conflagrations they started in Kagoshima and Omuta on Kyushu Island and Hamamatsu and Yokkaichi on Honshu Island billowed as high as 12,000 feet. Flames at Kagoshima were so bright they could be seen thru a hole in the overcast at 7,500 feet.

The low level fire raids were made before dawn in the 21st bomber command's new program of blasting the enemy's smaller cities, where hundreds of small but important factories and many thousands of home shops are located.

Write Off Kagoshima

Only two searchlights fingered the sky as leading elements attacked Kagoshima.

Grayish smoke indicated to the crew of one Super Fort that a chemical plant had been hit.

"I think we can write off Kagoshima, for the city was blazing right to the waterfront," reported Lt. George Mott, East Tallassee, Ala., commander of the last plane over the target.

"I saw only one dark spot and called to the bombardier to hit it. 'Hell, there's no use hitting that. It's a ball park,' he replied. I saw no fighter planes, but there was considerable anti-aircraft fire."

Two Cities Hit Before

Light raids previously had been made on Hamamatsu and Kagoshima, but these were the first attacks on Omuta and Yokkaichi.

The fourway blow appeared to be the start of the second phase of incendiary destruction of Japan's war industries, shifting from Tokyo and other large cities to the secondary centers.

Maj. Gen. Curtis Le May announced last week that the B-29s had knocked the key cities—Tokyo, Yokohama, Nagoya, Osaka, and Kobe—out of or nearly out of war production.

The population of Omuta, on the northeast coast of Kyushu's Shimabara gulf, is about 177,000. It has the largest artificial harbor in Japan and is a principal coal shipping port.

Kagoshima, with a population of 181,736, is the major port of southern Kyushu and the capital of Kagoshima prefecture. The big Kanoya naval base is 22 miles southeast of the city.

Steel Plant at Yokkaichi

Yokkaichi is an important commercial and port city in the Nagoya area of Honshu. It is the site of textile mills and the Ishihara smelter and refinery and the Toho heavy industry steel plant. There are extensive railroad freight yards in the center of the city.

Hamamatsu, also in the Nagoya area, has a population of 165,000. The imperial government railway shops, third largest in Japan, are located there.

B-29 CHIEF FLIES NONSTOP, HAWAII TO WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Le May, chief of the B-29 air fleet striking Japan, has arrived in Washington after a record, nonstop flight by Super Fortress from Hawaii.

The war department announced his arrival today, saying he came to Washington with some of his staff for conferences at army air force headquarters.

With Le May flying the plane much of the way, the Super Fortress made the 4,640 mile nonstop jump from Hawaii in 20 hours and 15 minutes. Le May left his headquarters at Guam on Friday and made the entire flight from there to Washington, a distance of 8,420 miles, in 35 hours and 58 minutes.

YANKS GAIN ALL ALONG ENEMY'S PLATEAU LINE

GUAM, June 18 [Monday]—(AP)—The 6th marine division, conquerors of Naha and Oroku peninsula, moved into the southern Okinawa Yaeju sector yesterday and gained several hundred yards to a point south of Mezado town as the United States 10th army attacked all along the line against heavy resistance.

The body of Adm. Minoru Ota, commander of the Japanese naval base force on Okinawa, was discovered in a cave on Oroku peninsula, Fleet Adm. Nimitz said in today's war bulletin.

There were no details concerning Ota's death. The fact his body was discovered in a cave was taken as an indication he committed harakiri. However, a flame thrower might have killed him. The cave was part of a large underground headquarters system.

80,459 Japs Killed

Nimitz said an estimated 80,459 Japanese troops have been killed on Okinawa and 1,680 taken prisoner in 77 days of the 79 day old campaign.

United States casualties as of May 24—when Nimitz last reported American losses—were 5,332 soldiers and marines killed or missing, 21,343 wounded, a total of 26,675 in the ground fighting.

Military leaders estimate that 8,000 to 12,000 Japanese remain on Okinawa. There is no indication that this force can be defeated easily or quickly.

Five small groups of Japanese aircraft attacked American forces in the Okinawa area Saturday, sinking one light fleet unit, Nimitz reported. Three enemy planes were shot down.

This was the first damage suffered by Japanese aerial action in the Okinawa area in a week or more. During most of that time, the enemy did not venture forth in bad weather.

Sweep Past Kunishi Ridge

Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd's 6th division leathernecks, who presumably have completed mopping up Oroku peninsula, went into action in the 3d marine amphibious corps sector of Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger. They evidently swept down the west coast past the Kunishi ridge area where the 1st marine division is meeting particularly vicious opposition, then cut inland. Mezado town is nearly a mile south of Kunishi ridge, western anchor of the Yaeju escarpment defense line.

Maj. Gen. Pedro A. Del Valle's 1st division marines made "similar gains," Nimitz said, against "determined resistance at all points and were under heavy flanking fire."

The Japanese appear to have centered their defense in the Kunishi ridge sector, where for days their resistance has been heavier—and with more heavy arms—than elsewhere along the Yaeju escarpment.

Yanks Gain in Center

In the center of the line, Maj. Gen. James L. Bradley's 96th infantry division made limited gains against "very strong resistance from small arms and automatic weapons." They were driving south from their Yaeju and Yuza hill positions across a large plateau and had one more fortified hill to capture to clean out major enemy defenses.

Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold's 7th infantry division, engaged in mopping up Japanese strongholds around Hills 153 and 115 on the eastern end of the escarpment, in the Makaza vicinity, discovered large numbers of Okinawa civilians south of its lines near the southeast coast.

9,210 JAPS DIE IN WEEK

MANILA, June 18 [Monday]—(AP)—The American reconquest of the Philippines has cost the Japanese 9,210 killed and 1,037 captured in the last week, Gen. MacArthur announced today as the 37th infantry division marked up a 40 mile gain in three days against crumbling enemy resistance in the Cagayan valley of northern Luzon.

The week's casualties [approximately twice those of previous weeks] raised enemy dead and captured for the eight month campaign to 402,363, including those estimated to have perished in convoy sinkings off Leyte and others sealed in caves.

An American headquarters spokesman said that American casualties were slightly in excess of 50,000 killed, missing, and wounded. No figures were given for the air forces or navy.

Week's U. S. Casualties 627

American army casualties for the week were listed as 103 dead, two missing, and 522 wounded.

Most of the Japanese casualties for the week were on Luzon, where 6,912 dead were counted and 95 prisoners were taken. On Saturday, troops of Maj. Gen. Innis P. Swift's 1st corps wiped out 1,200 Japanese in the Cagayan valley and in the mountains to the west.

Maj. Gen. Robert S. Beightler's 37th division driving north under aerial support, reached Cauayan, 132 road miles from Aparri, where the Cagayan valley meets the sea.

Seize Town in West

Paralleling this drive, other elements of the 37th division took Cabatuan in the western edge of the valley. Sixth division troops fought enemy remnants in the mountains farther west, killing 189 Japanese and capturing 32 in one stubbornly resisting enemy band. Among the trophies of this fight was a nazi flag.

Elsewhere on Luzon, the 1st [dismounted] cavalry and the 112th regimental combat team counted 200 dead Japanese in the Lenatin river area near Infanta. The 38th division northeast of Manila broke thru 40 enemy cave positions and seized considerable ammunition and stores.

On Mindanao, fighting subsided somewhat as patrols lost contact with the retreating enemy east of the Sayre highway while the 24th infantry division engaged rear guards in a delaying action below Davao city.

ARNOLD PRAISES NIMITZ AT GUAM B-29 CHRISTENING

GUAM, June 18 [Monday]—(AP)—A new Super Fortress sponsored by Adm. Nimitz was christened "Fleet Adm. Nimitz" today at ceremonies attended by Gen. Arnold, commander of United States army air forces.

Arnold praised Nimitz, declaring, "This base, created in such a short time, is another manifestation of the support Adm. Nimitz has given and is giving to make strategic bombing a success out here in the Pacific."

Accepting sponsorship of the plane, Nimitz said the decision to come to the Marianas was made at Washington, D. C., in March, 1944, and that Arnold was "a strong factor" in reaching the decision.

He wished the crew of the plane "many happy landings and good hunting." Crew members include: Capt. John R. Patterson, Rock Island, Ill., and Lt. Melvin H. Midents, Kamrar, Ia.

Jap Rear Guards in Burma Suffer Heavily in Attack

CALCUTTA, India, June 17 (AP)—British troops in south Burma have inflicted heavy casualties on rear guard Japanese units in an attack on a strong enemy hill position 21 miles east of Prome, a southeast Asia bulletin said today. In the area northeast of Pegu British patrols found several villages clear of the enemy.

GEN. M'ARTHUR CONSPICUOUS BY ABSENCE IN U. S.

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—With the arrival tomorrow of Gen. Eisenhower, Washington's visitor list will contain the names of almost every top ranking American commander—except Gen. MacArthur.

At one time or another during the last three and a half years of war the various commanders, army and navy, have come to Washington for conferences. It has been more than six years since MacArthur was in the capital.

He was in the Philippines as commanding general of the far eastern command when the Japanese struck. During the war MacArthur's closest approach to the United States has been his trip to Hawaii a year ago when the late President Roosevelt asked him to meet him there for a conference.

It is customary for commanders to journey to Washington during war time only at the invitation or direction of either the White House or the departmental chiefs.

29 London Buses Hit by Flying Bombs, Rockets

NIMITZ SETS A PRECEDENT IN BLASTING CRITIC

BY HAROLD SMITH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Guam, June 17—Fleet Adm. Nimitz in calling a special conference of war correspondents today to refute Newspaper Columnist David Lawrence's criticism of ground force tactics on Okinawa, took a step without precedent in his conduct of the war in the Pacific.

This writer has covered the Pacific war in Nimitz's theater for nearly two years. Never before today in all that time has any high naval officer based an entire press conference on the utterances of a news commentator.

Nimitz, apparently aware of the unusualness of his action, read a prepared statement calmly, then opened the meeting of questions, which he met with unruffled skill. His manner thruout was that of a highly responsible leader, gravely concerned over the possible repercussions of the Lawrence article.

Author Misinformed, He Says

The admiral's statement said Lawrence's criticism showed "the author had been badly misinformed, so badly as to give the impression that he has been made use of for purposes which are not in the best interests of the United States."

He later enlarged on this by saying that obviously the author could not have had firsthand information on his subject, and pointed out that Lawrence must have gotten his material from some one "with an ax to grind."

In reply to a question the admiral declined to draw a parallel between the Okinawa criticisms and those which occurred in the Saipan campaign, during which an army general was relieved in the field. The questioner obviously was attempting to learn whether the Lawrence blast might have been inspired by rivalry among the various branches of the service which are represented in every amphibious operation.

No Rivalry Among Leaders

That such rivalry exists in the lower echelons is well known to any one who has covered even one amphibious operation. It is only fair to add, however, that there has never been any hint of such rivalry at the top of the Pacific command.

Correspondents who have accompanied the landing forces on numerous operations and who have had many conferences with high ranking commanders, have encountered only complete harmony at the top. They have seen no evidence that the nation's interests have been subordinated to inter-service jealousy.

In the course of my war coverage I have made five amphibious landings with the marines and six with army forces. In each case I have heard men of one service deprecate the accomplishments of the other. But I have also heard men of one regiment ridicule those of another in the same division, or one battalion's, or company's, or platoon's personnel criticized by that of corresponding outfits engaged in the same action.

Adds to Fighting Spirit

Correspondents frequently have discussed this unending verbal contest and have put it down generally to morale.

"Hell," one correspondent said recently, "I wouldn't want to land with any outfit that didn't think it was the best in the world—and that would imply, of course, that it thought all other outfits were inferior and deserving of its scorn."

Many field unit commanders try to silence derogation of other units, especially those from another service branch. But neutral observers are inclined to the belief that while self-boasting and interservice carping are not pleasant to impartial ears, they wouldn't care to change the habit so long as it continues to add to America's over-all fighting spirit.

It is felt that any outfit is only as good as it thinks it is. If it feels the neighboring outfit is inferior and undertakes to prove in action its own superiority it is bound to do a better job of fighting.

Pride Harmony of Effort

It is only when the contenders get to pulling in different directions, which hasn't happened yet in this war, or when the people back home are led to believe they are, that interservice championship becomes actually detrimental.

But that is less the fault of the participants than of those who report only part of the picture or who attach undue significance to the over exuberance of superfighting men whose hearts are great with pride in their own service or unit.

Nimitz, commander in chief of the Pacific ocean areas, and high members of his joint staff, have always spoken with deep pride of the harmony of effort that exists out here among the army, navy, marines, and air forces.

They made scrupulously clear their relization that it is the combined work of all, functioning together with a unity unmatched before in history, that has produced such spectacular successes in the war against Japan.

PASSENGER TRAIN RAMS FREIGHT

McGriff, Ga., June 17 [AP]—The Kansas City special, en route to Jacksonville, Fla., ploughed into a freight train pulling into a siding on southern railway tracks here early today, seriously injuring two trainmen. Only the engine of the passenger train overturned and passengers in 12 coaches and pullmans escaped injury.

BRITISH AT TRUK ON 2D MISSION FOR ADM. NIMITZ

English Plan to Use Isles as Base Reported

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 17—The use of the British fleet in the Pacific to batter the by-passed Japanese base at Truk, in the Caroline islands, marks the second time that Adm. Nimitz has called on the units of British Adm. Bruce Fraser for work in the Pacific.

In the previous instance the British fleet was used to neutralize the Sakashima group in the Ryukyu islands, south of Okinawa, to protect our forces from any attacks the Japs might have tried to launch from the south.

The fact that in both instances the British have worked alone as a unit and not as an integrated part of the American forces is believed to indicate, observers here said, that Adm. Nimitz, who has overall command in the Pacific, will continue to employ the British ships as an independent unit.

Plan Favored by British

This is said to be desired by the British, who wish to retain their own identity in their Pacific operations.

Whether such use of the British ships confirms reports, current some months ago, that they do not have sufficient speed to stay with the fast ships of our wide ranging task forces, could not be learned.

Last March, when Adm. Nimitz was in Washington, he was asked at a press conference about the reports, but he did not give a direct reply. Instead, he said that "Adm. Fraser has stated that the British fleet is ready and equipped for duty," and that "at the right time it will be used in a manner that will contribute greatly to the war against Japan."

Defensive Ability Doubted

Another reason advanced in authoritative quarters for not using the British fleet close to the Japanese homeland in an engagement such as that at Okinawa is the reported inability of the British to cope with the Japanese suicide planes with as much success as the American ships and gunners.

The Americans by-passed Truk in the sweep to the west in which Guam and Saipan were wrested from the enemy. In April of this year the Army and Navy Journal reported there was talk in British circles of taking the Japanese base at Truk for use by England's fleet in the Pacific.

Truk, bombed and shelled Thursday and Friday by British Pacific fleet carrier planes and warships, is a cluster of 245 islands lying athwart American supply lines between Guam and Hawaii.

Fierce attacks by American bombing planes in the spring and early summer of 1944 knocked Truk out of the war as a base for Japanese offensive operations, but the Japs are still there and their defenses formidable. When the war began, Truk was the central powerhouse for Japanese Pacific naval action, with facilities to shelter the whole Japanese fleet and base facilities for an invasion army.

GI Joe in the Pacific

By ARTHUR VEYSEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

HOSPITAL IN BURMA [By Air Mail]—The corporal sloshed up the muddy path to a thatched basha where nurses and Red Cross girls live. He was grinning and he had one arm behind his back, hiding his present just as, until two years ago, he used to hide a bunch of poppies or a box of chocolates when he walked up to the porch where his date waited for him to take her to the movies.

"Hi," he called, scraping the worst of the mud from his boots. He was careful to keep his back away from the door. He had brought a special present and wanted it to be a surprise.

A girl came out onto the scrap lumber platform that passes for a porch.

"Hello," she said.

"Surprise," the corporal shouted, and with a flourish swung his arm from behind him.

The girl beamed like a Burma moon. "Why," you darling, where did you ever find such wonderful—Is it for me?" she said.

"All yours,' said the corporal. "Maybe some day I'll be able to get another."

* *

And what was all this fuss about? Orchids? Chocolate covered cherries? Don't be silly. This was a present every girl in Burma dreams of. It was a stink bomb to kill mosquitoes. The bombs are very, very hard to get.

That's the way it goes. When guys come calling they bring presents like these.

A couple of cans of beer make acceptable gifts and if a guy can bring a fire extinguisher along he's teekhi. Teekhi is an American corruption of the native term for super. The fire extinguisher is used to cool the beer. The cans are placed in a bucket and the extinguisher turned on them.

People with an "in" with the mess hall have a good choice of gifts—cheese, fruit juices, crackers, jam. The mess sergeant showed up the other night with a whole two layer chocolate cake with happy birthday wriggling across the top. Mess sergeants like him are much more fascinating than colonels.

* *

Some come running with gifts just arrived from home, such as camera film, fountain pens, hard candy, and, at rare occasions, a bottle of whisky that made the long, dangerous journey cushioned in the middle of a loaf of bread.

Then there are those who make their own gifts. Scrap metal becomes bracelets. Coins become rings. Bits of ebony and ivory become tiny elephants or dancing girls that will some day decorate fireplace mantels.

And there isn't a girl who couldn't use some sort of cabinet to keep clothes more nearly dry. With a little time, a hammer and saw, a clever fellow can make one out of crates. An electric fan is more difficult but not too difficult for a man with a will.

And there is one girl who should dream every night of an air corps mechanic. He came in a truck. He needed it to tote his gift. It was a bed with most comfortable springs made from old inner tubes.

CROWN PRINCE OF DENMARK TO VISIT BORNHOLM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 17 — Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Ingrid will leave by plane tomorrow for the soviet occupied Danish island of Bornholm, where they will be the guests of Russian Gen. Korotkov at an elaborate luncheon. The Russian commander of the Baltic island personally arranged the feast. Several soviet cooks arrived by plane and took over the entire kitchen of the island's famous hotel. Refrigerator cars arrived from Moscow bringing special Russian dishes, including caviar, pigs' feet, calf heads, Russian pastry, and other delicacies. A military band will play in the park during the luncheon.

CRIPPLED PLANE SAVED BY WAC'S MONKEY WRENCH

Answer to Pilot's Prayer in Musette Bag

BY WALTER SIMMONS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

HOLLANDIA, New Guinea, June 14 [Delayed]—Pilots of the 322d troop carrier command, which moves 21,000 passengers and 12,000,000 pounds of freight monthly along a 5,500 mile route stretching from Melbourne, Australia, to Lingayen, Luzon, run into some strange experiences but the oddest have been with the WACs.

On a flight from Brisbane a few months ago, the hydraulic system of a transport plane went out, preventing the wheels from being lowered for a landing. The pilot circled while the crew chief worked despairingly. For some reason the plane did not contain a wrench with which the gear could be let down manually.

Maj. Russell Williams, Oklahoma City, Okla., staff officer of the wing, walked forlornly back into the passenger compartment. Stopping before two WAC passengers, he asked, just to make conversation: "I don't suppose either of you would have a monkey wrench in your purse, would you?"

"No," one answered calmly, "but I do have one in my musette bag."

She rummaged a moment and produced a huge wrench 18 inches long. With shouts of joy Maj. Williams bore it to the crew chief, who swiftly let down the gear for an uneventful landing.

When WACs of the far east air force were being ferried to Leyte from Hollandia, a C-47 transport in which they were riding roared down the runway but failed to gain enough speed to take off. Altho the pilot applied his brakes the plane rolled off the end of the strip and bogged down in the mud.

Col. Ray T. Elsmore, Menlo Park, Cal., commanding officer of a troop carrier wing, happened to be on board. He was sweating profusely. But not the WACs, none of whom had ridden in a plane before. "They always make a trial run before they take off," one remarked comfortably.

After the plane was pulled out of the mud, it tried again with precisely similar results. Investigation disclosed the reason—the standard allowance of 250 pounds for a male passenger and his baggage didn't apply to WACs. With their heavy luggage each feminine passenger represented from 325 to 350 pounds. "We had to make a little weight adjustment before we could take off," said Col. Elsmore.

Col. Elsmore, a native of Salt Lake City, Utah, is a veteran flyer who wears six Presidential citations—possibly a record. For 13 years he flew a reuglar air line run out of Salt Lake City, practiced law, and commanded the 329th observation squadron, a reserve unit. The outbreak of the war found him commanding an air unit in the Philippines. He flew from Mindanao in the last plane to leave the islands. As commander of the 322d he had worked out numerous operating improvements, including a system by which the average transport's pay load is increased 1,500 pounds by restricting surplus gasoline and increasing the number of fueling stops.

Among many Chicagoans in the unit are Lt. Jack Bussert, 6428 N. Hamilton av.; Staff Sergeants John Hega, 3701 W. 56th pl.; Charles Maciejewski, 3012 Broad st.; Robert Curtis, 946 S. Elmwood av., Oak Park; Jack Rutherford, 6728 Oglesby av.; Wilbur Kopp, 5742 Rice st.; Sergeants John Admis, 2735 S. Lawndale av.; Harry Nelson, 3462 North av.; Constantino Sebber., 2204 N. Mobile av.; Glenn Wilderspin, Route 1, West Chicago; Corporals Anthony Gangitano, 4419 Iowa st.; Reno Gersa, 2431 Chicago av.; William Brannan, 4319 S. Whipple st.; David Soutar Jr., 1045 N. Ridgeway av.; Pvt. Philip George, 1944 Grand av.; Pvt. Henry Schweizer, 1241 Cornelia av.; Pvt. Arthur Hansen, 4219 N. Avers av., and Pvt. Stephen Zachar, 2207 N. Laramie av.

A troop carrier plane once carried a cow which was valuable not for its milk but for vaccine. Other planes have carried live poultry, guinea pigs, mice, rabbits, and even a race horse. The horse became excited and kicked out the side of the plane. Pilots of the 322d all rank tops with the correspondents, who could hardly cover the vast reaches of the Southwest Pacific without their cheerful help to hitchhiking scribes.

Since its formation last fall, the wing has flown millions of miles with only one passenger fatality. That does not mean its planes have not been in hundreds of tight spots flying thru the turbulent Pacific weather.

Dad Repairs Son's Damaged Ship

It Will Fight Again

San Diego, Cal., June 18 [Monday]—(AP)—Commodore Byron McCandless, the 63 year old commanding officer of the San Diego naval repair base, surveyed the torn and crushed hull of the 2,100 ton destroyer Gregory in drydock. He turned to a young officer at his side and remarked: 'They sort of folded up your ship like an accordion, son. Can you play a tune on that thing."

The young officer smiled. He was Comdr. Bruce McCandless, 33, son of the older officer. Young McCandless commanded the Gregory in recent Pacific operations. She had been badly damaged by Japanese suicide planes.

Comdr. McCandless paid high tribute to his ship, his crew and the builders at Seattle [Todd-Pacific]. Only two crew members were injured when six Japanese suicide planes attacked the Gregory.

Comdr. McCandless wears the congressional medal of honor. In 1942 he served on the cruiser San Francisco which was seriously damaged in the action off Guadalcanal.

SINKING OF JAP PRISON SHIP BY U. S. SUB TOLD

[The army, navy, and air corps all have their heroes and their names are well known. Some of the most brilliant work of the war has been conducted by American submarines, a story held secret in the navy's voluminous files. Now a part of that story can be told. This is one in a series of stories on America's underwater heroes.]

PEARL HARBOR, June 17 (AP)—Thin, disease racked white men, fodder for Nippon's prison camps, were sprawled on the hot decks of a Japanese prison ship when an escorting destroyer disappeared before them in a blast of smoke and flame.

"Yank sub!" somebody said, and they sat up quickly, watching the green water. Japanese escort vessels dashed wildly about the big convoy. Then, as the Australian and English prisoners gave a silent cheer, the prison ship shuddered from an underwater blast. She listed sharply, her sides bashed in by American torpedoes.

Japanese guards on the prison ship chattered excitedly and scrambled for the boats, holding off the enfeebled prisoners. As the unmarked ship slumped slowly to starboard the Japanese shoved off, abandoning the men they had captured in the sweep thru Singapore.

A Tragic Mistake

It was a tragic mistake, this torpedoing of a ship carrying allied prisoners, but it was one of those inevitable errors of war. The ship looked no different from the others in the Japan bound convoy.

But the skipper of the American sub was given no chance to learn what his target carried. Even as the prison ship settled and survivors of the blasted destroyer struggled in the water, a fast escort ship closed in, spilling depth charges. Comdr. E. T. Reich of Elmhurst, N. Y., skipper of the submarine "Adder [a fictitious name used for security purposes] took his boat down.

Reich, who was graduated in 1935 from the United States Naval academy and who has served more than six years in the submarine service, avoided the underwater blasts. Then, late that night, he received a message asking him to assist in picking up survivors. It was from another American submarine in the convoy area.

Surfacing, the Adder moved thru the sea. First sighted were bodies, both Japanese and white. Then the Adder entered the target sector of the previous day. A tiny life raft bobbed on the waves and the Adder picked up the men on it.

54 Men Picked Up

While her sister boat assisted, the Adder moved slowly thru the area, retrieving Australians and English from the sea. In all the Adder picked up 54 men, the most she could get into her constricted hull. The other submarine picked up some 70.

"All the prisoners were suffering from malnutrition, malaria, pellagra and exposure," Reich said. "Darkness and space limitations prohibited further rescue."

"Then he added: "It was heartbreaking to leave so many dying men behind."

From the rescued, Reich learned his torpedo salvoes had yielded good results. He knew he had hit a tanker and the prison ship, but another bag was added—and he received confirmation that the three hits resulted in three sinkings.

JAPS WILL FIGHT HARD TO HOLD ON, SAYS STILWELL

General Sees No Crack in Enemy's Morale

MANILA, P. I., June 17 (AP)—In the opinion of a tough, old China campaigner, Gen. Stilwell, there is no evidence of any crack in Japanese morale and the enemy will not willingly disgorge any of his conquests, including China, without putting up as strong a fight as possible.

In an interview at Gen. MacArthur's headquarters Stilwell, now chief of the army ground force training program, said it was his belief the Japanese were "loath to give up what they have grabbed. I expect them to fight for it."

Impressed by U. S. Gains

Stilwell said he was tremendously impressed that American forces are fighting in the Philippines in 1945 rather than a year or more later, implying that the Pacific war was better than a year ahead of schedule in obtaining troops and supplies for an offensive while the European war was still underway.

The general came here to correlate the replacement training program with the needs of MacArthur's theater. He asserted he believes the basic training principles already in use are sound and that men physically fit, well disciplined, and qualified in the use of their arms are able to do a good job anywhere.

U. S. Has Finest Troops

Thus the retraining of veterans from the European theater for use in the Pacific will not be as difficult as might be supposed.

"We've got the troops—there was never any finer soldier material in the world—and we've got the material and air power to throw everything at the Japanese now," the general said.

INDIA-BURMA GENERAL SENT ON NEW MISSION

Lt. Gen. Wheeler (top) and Lt. Gen. Sultan

Lt. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler will assume command of the theater on Sultan's departure, while continuing as deputy supreme allied commander and principal administrative officer of the southeast Asia command.

Sultan has been in command of the India-Burma theater since last October when the China-Burma-India theater was split after Gen. Stilwell's return home. Wheeler commanded the services of supply in the C. B. I. theater until November, 1943, when he took over his post as administrative officer with the newly-formed southeast Asia command.

CHINESE SMASH INTO LIUCHOW'S WEST DEFENSES

Repel Jap Attacks in 25 Mile Gain

CHUNGKING, China, June 17 (AP)—Chinese troops have driven up to 25 miles into the shattered western defenses of the south China rail hub of Liuchow, hurling back two Japanese counter-drives near the former American air base city, the Chinese command said tonight.

Despite Chinese gains, swaying, indecisive fighting marked the month-long struggle for possession of Liuchow. Another battle apparently raged on the approaches to Wenchow, east coast Chinese port.

The Chinese high command for the second day failed to mention the Wenchow sector. Chinese troops last were reported attacking the city where Japanese forces were said to be in flight northward toward Shanghai.

Drive Between Highways

Chinese columns, a war bulletin said, punched out their advance west of Liuchow following capture of Ishan, 43 miles west of the city.

Driving between highways linking Ishan with Liuchow and with Tatang, 21 miles southwest of Liuchow, the Chinese reached points 17 to 24 miles southwest of the air base and were about 13 miles from Tatang.

At the same time, another Chinese column pushed four and a half miles along the Kwangsi-Kweiyang [Kweichow] railroad and battered 10½ miles east of Ishan and 32 miles northwest of Liuchow, the bulletin said.

The Chinese belatedly reported that the Japanese opened two counter-offensives from Liuchow driving southwestward and apparently recapturing Tatang, seizure of which the Chinese claimed 10 days ago.

Jap Gains Undisclosed

One Japanese thrust was hurled against Tsinkong, 53 miles southeast of Liuchow, on June 11. The second drive was against Laipin on June 13.

Tsinkong is on the highway from Liuchow to Indo-China, a supply route that was severed recently by the Chinese. How far the Japanese advanced was not disclosed by Chinese headquarters.

The Chinese bulletin also admitted the loss of two towns in southwestern Kiangsi province to the Japanese who drove northward from coastal Kwangtung.

The Japanese, seeking to strengthen their anti-invasion defenses in South China, took Lungnan and Tingnan, both 130 miles northeast of Canton, after outnumbering the Chinese two to one.

Yanks Bomb Jap Lines

As the Chinese fell back, fighting developed five miles north and 12 miles northwest of Tingnan and at points 24 and 29 miles northeast of Lungnan along the highway to Sinfeng.

Sweeping from the Yellow river south to the Indo-China frontier, United States 14th air force fighters ranged over more than 2,000 miles of Japanese communication lines yesterday, an American bulletin said.

In central China, fighters concentrated on rail and water supply routes in the Tungting lake sector while others strafed the former American air field at Kweilin, 90 miles northeast of Liuchow.

Bomb Plot Fails

SYDNEY, Australia, June 18 [Monday]—(AP)—Police today disclosed a threat to assassinate the duke of Gloucester, governor general, and the duchess while they were visiting Brisbane last week. A letter, apparently from a crank, declared he intended to hurl a hand grenade at Gloucester's car and use another to destroy himself. Precautions were taken.

STRONGARMED IN GRANT PARK

Stephen Kermasin of Wheaton, Du Page county, complained to police that a man had strongarmed him in Grant park early yesterday and robbed him of $13 and a watch valued at $100.

AUSSIES USING U. S. EQUIPMENT IN BORNEO PUSH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., June 17—Australian troops who invaded Borneo June 10 to free the island from the Japanese and gain oil and rubber supplies for the allies were armed with equipment furnished by the United States under lend-lease and were supported by American lend-lease planes flown by Australians, it was disclosed today.

Leo T. Crowley, foreign economic administrator, in reporting the role American supplies played in the invasion, which was made under the supervision of Gen. MacArthur, said in a statement that such equipping of troops is one factor in a program by which the United States is helping to strengthen her Pacific and far eastern allies for the offensive against the Japanese.

Share Food with U. S.

In return for this aid, Crowley said, these allies are sharing their food and other assets with our forces in both the Pacific and the India-Burma-China theaters and thus giving reverse lend-lease.

Crowley said that up to April 30 the United States furnished lend-lease materials to Australia valued at $1,075,321,000, and furnished services, including the transportation of war materials, valued at additional millions of dollars. Munitions furnished more than half of this total. Ordnance and ammunition lend-leased to Australia to this date were valued at $107,186,000; aircraft and parts, $317,211,000; tanks and vehicles, $213,577,000, and water craft, $11,670,000.

Machinery Provided

Tools, machinery, and other industrial equipment valued at $388,780,000 also were furnished. With these materials, Crowley said, Australia has expanded her production of munitions and other materials of war.

In April lend-lease shipments to Australia totaled $36,179,000, with aircraft worth $18,459,000 the largest single item.

To offset this aid from the United States, which totaled $967,758,000 from the start of lend-lease until Jan. 1, 1945, Australia provided this nation with reverse lend-lease amounting to $720,673,000, Crowley said.

DUCK LEADS HER 6 DUCKLINGS ON WALK THRU CITY

A mother duck with her week old brood of six ducklings simulated a naval deployment maneuver in a manner deserving of an admiral's "Well done." The wild duck and her flotilla waddled their way from a pond in Graceland cemetery to Lake Michigan, almost a mile away.

Their route took them east in Buena av. Lacking an air umbrella or any other protection, the valiant mother who performed the same feat a year ago, led her brood thru such danger zones as Broadway, Sheridan rd., and Marine dr. Traffic was halted as they paraded by.

Crossing the Outer dr. without incident, she altered her course to northeasterly, taking the convoy to a small pond where formation and short dive maneuvers were practised. Then continuing on the established course, they arrived at Montrose harbor. At last reports each one was taking to the lake like a duck.

War in Borneo

Captions tell new developments in battle for Borneo.

MANILA, June 18 [Monday]—(AP)—Continued Australian infantry patroling of the Brunei bay area of British Borneo and development of allied bases there was announced today by Gen. MacArthur, who still gave no confirmation of Japanese reports that allied warships had bombarded the Balikpapan area on the southeast coast of Dutch Borneo.

Nor did his war bulletin confirm an Australian broadcast which said the Aussie 9th division had pushed southwest from Brunei within 12 miles of Tuotong, oil refining center, as reported by Melbourne.

MacArthur announced that allied torpedo boats were ranging far down the coast toward the southwest and had "placed effective neutralizing fire on enemy positions at Miri," oil field area 75 miles from Brunel, and at Lutong, farther south.

Allied heavy bombers continued their assaults on Balikpapan, dropping 130 tons on anti-aircraft positions and on the nearby Seppingan air field, the bulletin disclosed. Medium bombers and fighters maintained attacks on enemy communications in north Borneo.

BELGIAN STRIKE THREAT AWAITS RETURN OF KING

New Abdication Demands Are Made

BRUSSELS, Belgium, June 17 (AP)—Police guarded the national radio station and central telegraph office today and there were hints of a general strike as Belgium awaited return of King Leopold. Brussels street car employes said they would quit work when the king sets foot on Belgian soil.

Amid new demands that he abdicate, the ministry of information announced that the 43 year old monarch who surrended himself and his army 18 days after the German invasion in 1940 would return "soon"—construed by some to mean tomorrow. He has been in Salzburg, Austria.

The cabinet, headed by Socialist Premier Achille van Acker, resigned yesterday in protest against his return but pledged itself to keep order until a new cabinet takes over. The socialist party executive board reaffirmed the party's demand that the king abdicate.

Considers Self Blameless

The communist newspaper Le Drapeau proclaimed that "all forces of democracy and of work are behind the Van Acker governments," and demanded: "Democrats, hold yourselves in readiness to respond to coups de force [struggles for power] which are being prepared."

[The French press agency (AFP), in a Brussels dispatch reported by the OWI, said delegates of the Liberal, Socialist, and Communist parties and labor organizations asserted in a manifesto that "if opponents act in a manner making total cessation of work inevitable, they will bear responsibility for it."]

Van Acker told Leopold that elements of the Belgians do not want him—that they still hold it against him that he surrendered and remained in Nazi hands.

Leopold, however, is understood to consider himself above reproach, and duty bound to lay his case before the people and let them decide whether he should resume the throne kept by his brother, the Prince Regent Charles.

Election May Result

Some Belgians believe the situation will result in a general election—immensely difficult now because the pre-war balloting machinery is disorganized and large numbers of Belgians are still absent as refugees and unrepatriated ex-slave laborers.

The Van Acker cabinet, in resigning, issued a bulletin telling the king what it thought he should decide—the first time in history that the Belgian government has dared to speak to its king in such plain language.

The cabinet insisted that Leopold form a new cabinet ready to go into office as soon as he returned, in view of the dangerous situation that might develop.

The Liberal party announced it would refuse to participate in any new government formed by Leopold. Since the Socialists and Communists already had decided on the same course, this means the monarch could count on the Catholics as the only party to form a new cabinet.

Because an all-Catholic government would have only a minority in parliament, the natural consequence would be the dissolution of parliament and the calling of a national election.

THREE LEFTIST PARTIES FORM BLOC IN PRAGUE

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, June 17 (AP)—Three of Czechoslovakia's four political parties—Nationalist Socialist, Social Democrat, and Communist—formed a working bloc today and agreed on broad general reconstruction policies. The Peoples party, basically Catholic, did not join in the agreement.

The bloc may assume importance in the provisional parliament, which is to serve a few months before the elections later this year. According to present plans the four parties will be represented about equally in the provisional parliament and the bloc assures an effective working majority.

The three parties emphasized their agreement was something less than a coalition. Each retained its own program and will present its own candidates for election.

The Inquiring Camera Girl

BY MARYON ZYLSTRA

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Frances Mann, 1446 W. 62d st.]

THE QUESTION

Have you ever thought you were a failure?

WHERE ASKED

THE ANSWERS

Benny Strong, 430 N. Michigan av.—Not very long ago we had a one night engagement. When we arrived we discovered the population of the town was 104. Near the ballroom was a pen which contained about 2,000 turkeys, but turkeys don't go dancing. However, people arrived from neighboring towns and we had a good crowd.

Bea Herold, vocalist, 5229 Woodlawn av.—When I first started singing I had a very important audition. What a flop it turned out to be. I was very nervous and nearly in tears. The words wouldn't come out of my mouth. I was so humiliated and felt so foolish. I didn't get that job and thought I'd never sing again.

Bob Thompson, 2106 Lunt av.—I was with a bunch of the boys in Elgin. We drove to Chicago and as we came into the city I said I was an old Chicagoan and knew the best way downtown. After I had taken them down five or six dead end streets and a couple of blind alleys they had no respect for my ability as a guide.

Harry Gosling, 9554 Merton av., Oak Lawn—The time that I considered myself a complete failure was when I was about 9. The circus was in town and promised me free tickets if I'd get a sky hook. Naturally I couldn't, and the thought of missing the circus was more than I could bear.

Elwood Carl, Cleveland, O.—I wonder if any one has felt so much of a failure as I did on this particular occasion. I was married on Christmas day and spent my honeymoon, my birthday, and New Year's eve in the hospital. I was willing to bet my wife thought she'd married one fine husband!

Wally Jylha, Ashtabula, O.—It was my one ambition in school to be a hero on the football team. I had visions of even being captain of the team. Just before our first game I broke my nose in a practice game. While the rest of the team put on a show I was among the spectators.

SPAIN RESENTS OSTRACISM FOR HER NEUTRALITY

Also Defend Suspicion Toward Moscow

BY HENRY WALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MADRID, Spain, June 17—Spain—government, people, and press—resent being treated as "war criminals," guilty of the "crime of neutrality." Officials and individuals defend Gen. Franco's policy with reasoning identical with that of Swiss and Eire spokesmen I encountered at the San Francisco conference.

They say: "The United States remained neutral more than two years until Japan attacked and Hitler and Mussolini declared war. If we had been attacked by the Nazis we would have defended ourselves and become co-belligerents with the allies. But we were not molested and remained neutral precisely like America for nearly three years in World War I., until the U-boats began sinking American ships, and in World War II. until the Pearl Harbor attack in 1941."

Spain points to her stanch loyalty of 20 years membership in the league of nations, and is offended at not being invited to the security conference, which is considered merely a revamping of the Geneva organization.

May Lead Neutral Bloc

"We consider Spain's peaceful record entitled her to the right to participate in any world institution to preserve peace," said a foreign office official, "and are extremely disappointed at being ignored at San Francisco."

There are indications that Madrid may emerge as the leader of the group of neutral nations, with certain support from Holland, Belgium, Portugal, Denmark, Norway, and other small nations who wish to avoid participation in future wars unless attacked or invaded, as none of these states are affected by the "balance of power."

Officialdom here also objects to being put on the spot for antagonism to communism and suspicion of soviet Russia.

American Action Cited

Characteristically, the Madrid Arriba today publishes a photograph of Ribbentrop shaking hands with Stalin at the Kremlin, at the signing of the Nazi-Russian pact in the summer of 1939, to illustrate an article on the reich foreign minister's arrest at Hamburg.

"Why do the United States and Britain object to our maintaining a skeptical policy toward Moscow?" asked a foreign affairs personage. "America recognized the soviets only in 1934, and both London and Washington branded the Kremlin as back stabbers during the first two years of the war, until Hitler invaded Russia.

"Allied policy regarding Finland, Belgium, and France also vacillated, blowing first hot, then cold, according to those countries' relations with Berlin. Spain's point of view is actuated by principles, and we hold a definite point of view not swerved by opportunism."

FALL IS FATAL TO WORKER

Edward West, 56, of 6848 Lafayette av., a war plant worker, was fatally injured yesterday when he fell from a ladder at 6926 State st. while he was helping a friend, Walter Spiesser, repair a roof.

Board Is Named to Review Sentences of Army Courts

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—Creation of a clemency board to aid War Undersecretary Patterson in reviewing court martial convictions was announced today by the war department.

Judge Minton

The formation of the board followed several recent instances in which members of congress had demanded investigations of court martial sentences, notably in the case of a soldier convicted for striking German prisoners of war.

Judge Sherman Minton of the Circuit Court of Appeals, former senator from Indiana, will be chairman of the new board.

Other Board Members

Other members include Austin H. MacCormick, vice chairman, who was commissioner of correction for New York City; Brig. Gen. Rufus S. Ramey, who was in charge of anti-tank defenses at the Anzio beachhead and who commanded an armored task force which pursued the Germans up the Italian peninsula; Col. Hubert D. Hoover, who was on the staff of the judge advocate general in Europe, and Lt. Col. James P. Hendrick, who has been handling clemency cases in the war department.

The board will devote its attention to "the more serious" cases, the announcement said.

Under army regulations, clemency action reducing sentences of men sentenced to army disciplinary barracks and federal prisons must be reviewed by the undersecretary. The new board will recommend policies on clemency during and after the war.

Inquiry Body Urged

A special committee of the house of representatives to investigate all army and navy court martial sentences imposed since Pearl Harbor had been proposed by Rep. Barry [D., N. Y.].

Barry and House Majority Leader McCormack [D., Mass.] were among those in congress who protested the two years at hard labor sentence imposed upon Pvt. Joseph McGee of Worcester, Mass., for striking nine German war prisoners in France. McGee's sentence later was canceled and his dishonorable discharge was revoked.

Rep. Fulton [D., Pa.] who had served with the navy in the Pacific, some time ago said that service men had been talking about the severe punishments being given out.

Canadians Told to Curb Travel; Troops Returning

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OTTAWA, Ont., June 17—An appeal was made today to all hotels and to the Canadian public to cancel conventions and similar gatherings between June 20 and July 20, and to avoid railroad traffic during the period. J. L. Ilsley, minister of transport, and C. D. Howe, minister of munitions and supply, said all possible rail and hotel accommodation will be required to take care of veterans returning from Europe. Service men are to be returned to Canada from Europe at a rate of 30,000 a month, the ministers said.

SCANDINAVIANS TELL FEARS OF RED NEIGHBORS

Soviet Might and Stalin Program Add Worry

BY HAL FOUST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 17—Norway, Sweden, and Denmark fear Russia. Their newspapers treat the subject delicately but it is discussed openly and frankly in the restaurants and hotel lobbies of Oslo, Stockholm, and Copenhagen. Wearing the uniform of a United States army war correspondent in these capitals for the last month has seemed to invite questions about Premier Stalin that could not be answered.

Four issues are discussed in Scandinavia as grounds for the apprehension.

1. The new proximity of the soviets in Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, East Prussia, Poland, and Germany. Particular significance is attached to the presence of Red troops in a Norwegian arctic port, and on the Danish island of Bornholm near the mouth of the Baltic sea.

Stalin Program a Worry

2. The military strength of the soviets, and evidence of the Stalin program of expansion.

3. Confidence in the power of Great Britain as a protector of the small kingdoms was shaken by its secondary role to the United States on the western front and in the Pacific war.

4. The blackout on news from Russian occupied territory arouses suspicion and rumors.

In Sweden, largest of the three countries and geographically closest to the expanded soviet zone of influence, government sources are emphasizing the aid its neutrality gave to the allies, and explaining that its aid to Hitler was compulsory. In discussions of the country's future safety, United States air power is frequently mentioned as having displaced the British navy as its main reliance.

Learns Dominant U. S. Role

However, its historic neutrality grants 10 Japanese correspondents accreditation at the foreign office, the largest press delegation of any foreign country, and larger than news interests alone would warrant.

In Norway, still housing capitulated German armies and still lacking food, the public gradually is learning of America's dominant part in its liberation and its post-war relief, notwithstanding British domination of the news and the display of its paratroopers, navy, and air force in the allied forces there.

In Denmark the vast majority look to Great Britain for their future economy as well as future security, turning shivering backs on Russia's Baltic acquisitions. Before the war Great Britain purchased more than half of all Danish exports, mainly foodstuffs, while the United States took 1.8 per cent and the soviet union only 2/10 of 1 per cent.

During the war the Nazis bought all Denmark's exports paying with money taken from the Danish national bank. Now the united nations buy milk, with America paying its usual proportion in united nations projects.

Aid to British Diplomacy

In all three countries, admiration for royalty is an aid to British diplomacy in solidifying its relations in this one corner of Europe where its relations are not shaky. The palace guards in Oslo, Stockholm, and Copenhagen are applauded with fresh fervor in their daily parades.

The three old kings are glamorized as emblems in the wave of nationalism celebrating the end of the nazi war.

However, small communist minorities in Scandinavia are gaining strength, according to native observers. Leftists outnumber the actual Reds, and competent political analysts predict a trend toward further government control of industry and commerce in the elections scheduled for this fall.

At 100 She Takes Ride in Plane

A 'PARTY GIRL' GETS 1ST PLANE RIDE AT AGE 100

BY DOROTHY JOHNSON

"Grandma" added another experience to her century of living yesterday. She went for her first airplane ride. Altho she found it exciting, she told the pilot to go higher and faster. "I used to ride horseback in Ohio as a girl," she said, "and I never let any grass grow under MY feet."

On Thursday, when Mrs. Irene Amanda Woods, the daughter of pioneer fighting men, celebrated her 100th birthday in her home at 1059 Foster av., she told her large, assembled family that, ever since those Wright brothers began fooling around, she had wanted to go for a plane ride. The American Air Lines took her word for it, and yesterday she arrived at the airport with an orchid on her shoulder and a gleam in her eye.

Thinks Whole Idea Grand

Waving her hand jauntily, she stepped into the plane with the assistance of Stewardess Betty Ashton, the door closed, and the plane took off. Capt. Walter Dworn, the pilot, taking a fancy to Grandma, flew at 1,500 feet at 170 miles an hour over the Foster av. home. Grandma looked down and thought the whole idea was pretty grand.

Waiting at the airport gate while Mrs. Woods had her fling in the clouds were her anxious great-granddaughters, Mrs. Myrtle Walker of 7355 S. Damen av., Mrs. Elsa Castell of 1440 E. 67th st., and Mrs. Violet Wallace of 6042 La Salle st.

But nobody need have worried about Grandma. She stepped out of the plane, after the cruise over the city, and said: "That was swell. Now, when do I get those pork chops?"

Other Wish Is Granted

"Right now," she was told, and was taken to the headquarters of American's "sky chef," who, thru some magic, had conjured up two fine chops and fried them. Pork chops had been Grandma's other birthday wish.

Mrs. Woods is a "party girl," her descendants said. She's modern, broadminded, and likes to stay up late. "When there's a party," Mrs. Walker said, "Grandma is the last one to bed."

U. S. Air General Granted Freedom of English Town

SAFFRON WALDEN, England, June 17 (AP)—This 600 year old Essex town has conferred its freedom upon Jesse Auton of Covington, Ky., commanding general of the 65th fighter wing of the United States 8th air force. He is the fifth person and the first nonresident to be thus honored.

RUSSIANS READY FOR BIG THREE IN BERLIN SUBURBS

MOSCOW, June 17 (AP)—Several Berlin suburbs could handle in comfort and safety the forthcoming meetings of President Truman, Premier Stalin, and Prime Minister Churchill.

At one place the Russians have a large staff of Russian girls and women on hand already as cooks, waitresses, and chambermaids.

There even are several pianos, any one of which could be used by President Truman for his relaxation, and perhaps for the entertainment of Stalin and Churchill.

This suburb has one big meeting place large enough for any three-power conference.

Follows General Lines of League of Nations

navy will be "earmarked" for inclusion in the international police force to preserve peace, together with "a somewhat larger portion" of the United States army. The prospect, therefore, is that the American sea and air forces' contribution to the international police force will far exceed the British and Russian combined and the American army contribution will be greater than the British, if not the Russian.

The procedure provided by the charter for bringing the forces of the member states into action to preserve peace raises numerous questions of the authority under our Constitution.

Duties of Council

The maintenance of peace is the province and duty of the league's security council, composed of the Big Five, which are permanent members, and six nonpermanent rotating smaller nations. Any one of the Big Five is privileged to veto a decision to employ the international police force against itself or another nation accused of aggression or other breach of the peace. When not a party to the controversy, any one of the Big Five could veto even pacific measures to settle a dispute. Five of the six smaller nations combined could exercise the same veto privilege accorded a single great power.

The charter provides that the security council, if unable to settle a dispute by peaceful means, shall endeavor to prevent a breach of the peace by various measures of coercion short of the use of armed force. Thus, the Big Five members plus at least two small nations, making a majority of seven, could call upon the members of the league to break diplomatic and commercial relations and sever all communication with the nation threatening war.

Senate Debate Certain

If such coercion should prove inadequate, the security council, by the same unanimous vote of the Big Five and at least two small nations, could order the international police force into action against the offending country. "Such action," the charter provides, "may include demonstrations, blockade and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of members of the organization."

Inasmuch as such action would be war the question would arise of the power under the United States Constitution to send American forces into war without the express authorization of congress, constitutionally the sole war making power. This question will come in for consideration at length by the senate when the new peace league's charter shall be submitted for ratification.

Conflicting Views

Already there is lively debate of the question. The nationalists contend that only under a declaration of war by congress could the American quota of the international police force legally be sent into action. The internationalists hold that the President, thru his representative in the security council, could employ American forces for police duty as the executive always has used the armed forces to protect American interests without the express sanction of congress. Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], takes the position that the executive could act independently in a police operation, but if a major war were involved it would be necessary to seek a declaration by congress.

The United States, of course, could exercise its power of veto in the security council to prevent employment of the international police force pending action by congress. The internationalists, however, will seek legislation authorizing the American forces into war without reference in each case to congress.

Similar to 1941

The situation envisaged is similar to that which obtained in 1941 before Pearl Harbor. President Roosevelt was using the American navy to convoy cargoes to Great Britain and instructed American commanders to "shoot it out" with German submarines and other craft, if necessary. The President, however, did not inform congress what he was doing and inasmuch as the country was about 80 per cent against getting into the war it is doubtful that congress would have declared war, if it had known.

The charter provides for the establishment of a military staff committee to advise the security council "on all questions relating to the security council's military requirements for the maintenance of international peace and security, to the employment and command of forces placed at its disposal, to the regulation of armament and to possible disarmament." The military staff would work out a plan for reduction and limitation of armies, navies and air forces which would be embodied in a convention to be signed by the member nations.

The military staff committee is to be composed of the chiefs of staff of the Big Five powers. It would decide on the command of forces and would be responsible for their strategic direction.

The charter directs that "in order to enable urgent military measures to be taken by the organization" member nations shall hold air force contingents "immediately available . . . for the combined international enforcement action." The strength and degree of readiness of these contingents are to be determined by the security council with the assistance of the military staff committee within the limits specified by agreements with the military powers.

Could Use United States Bases

These agreements are to govern the numbers and types of forces contributed to the international police force, their degree of readiness and general location, and the nature of the facilities and assistance to be provided. The charter provides that these forces are to be made available to the security council on its call. Each nation also is to permit passage of the international police force thru its territory.

Among the facilities the United States would be obligated to place at the disposal of the security council are American military bases in any part of the world.

The special agreements placing such forces and facilities at the disposal of the security council are to be made between the security council and the member nations. The negotiation of the agreements is to be initiated by the security council as soon as the peace league begins to function. In the case of the United States the agreement will be subject to ratification by the senate.

BODY FOUND IN LAKE

Police yesterday were seeking the identity of a man about 50 whose body was taken out of Lake Michigan at the foot of Goethe st. He was 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed 150 pounds. A watch, stopped at 7 o'clock, was in one of his pockets.

"She's completely forgotten that welcome home speech she's been rehearsing all week."

British in Pola

POLA, Italy, June 17 [Reuters]—British troops, under the terms of the recent agreement with Marshal Tito, have entered Pola, now wrecked but once one of Italy's most prized naval bases. The major part of Tito's forces is to be withdrawn at 9 a. m. Tuesday when the main body of British troops will arrive to take over garrison duties.

The vanguard of the British arrived yesterday. For the entire distance from Trieste—about 118 miles—these troops did not pass a single motor vehicle. Almost every 10 feet "Viva Tito" was splashed in white paint on the road.

Italian civilians gave the British forces a great reception when they drove into the city center and Tito's Yugoslav soldiers, patrolling the streets, fully armed, stood stiffly to attention and saluted. Ten minutes after the British entry windows were decorated with Italian flags—and then the Communists marched along the streets tearing down the flags.

TRUMAN TALK SET FOR PARLEY OF GOVERNORS

President Truman will address the annual conference of state governors to be held in Mackinac Island, Michigan, July 1 to 4, it was announced yesterday at national headquarters of the governor's group, 1313 E. 60th st. The conference will discuss further participation by the states in prosecution of the war. Post-war plans also will be discussed.

If conditions at the time permit, President Truman will speak at the annual state dinner Tuesday night, July 3. Secretary Stettinius was invited to talk the preceding evening, but he replied that other affairs would prevent his attending.

Gov. Green of Illinois will speak on "An Adequate and Effective Aviation Program for America." Gov. Dewey of New York also will appear. Problems for discussion include veterans topics, social security, reconversion, conservation, and federal-state relations.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK

Question and Answer

We are asked ever so many times by readers of this little column, "Won't you please tell me just what's the best whiskey?" Of course, you're anticipating our answer but, begging your pardon, you're wrong.

Being biased, our natural response would be "Schenley's, of course," but that's not our answer. We believe that the fairest answer is one that is a combination of our own words plus those of E. C. Crocker, noted food chemist, who is the author of a book entitled FLAVOR, one in a series on food technology, published by McGraw-Hill Book Company, New York. Here is our complete answer:

"The best whiskey is the whiskey that tastes best to you." (Those are our words.)

And here are Mr. Crocker's:

"Whatever is pleasant is preferred over that which is less pleasant and is sure to be used more willingly . . ."

Mr. Crocker's book is well worth reading and contains most interesting information for those who consider taste something besides just a five-letter word. We, who are engaged in a commercial enterprise committed to the belief that the consumer is really boss, are very much interested, too, in Mr. Crocker's statement in his introduction, which immediately follows the quotation above:

"Commercially this may mean the greater sale of one man's product over his competitor's for the same human need, altho the price for the product is the same and the advertising appeal is equal."

Now, there is really something fundamental. Thank you very much, Mr. Crocker, we learned a great deal from you about our taste buds' reaction to the every-day foods and beverages we eat and drink.

SOVIET PROTEST BRINGS PARLEY TO A STANDSTILL

Meetings Called Off in New Stalemate

BY WILLARD EDWARDS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

San Francisco, Cal., June 17 — Drafting of a world peace charter virtually ceased tonight as Soviet Russia assailed a proposal for free debate in the new league of nations as a prospective menace to friendly relations among the nations.

With the June 23 deadline but six days distant, conference leaders sought frantically at a series of six emergency meetings lasting far into the night to budge Soviet Ambassador Gromyko from his stand.

All attempts failed. A scheduled open commission meeting had to be cancelled, a committee meeting dealing with the general assembly's functions and powers was called off. Only one committee functioned in an attempt to solve another problem, that of permitting members to withdraw from the international organization. By a vote of 24 to 19; it was decided not to include a specific provision for withdrawal, Russia among other nations noting that the right to quit the league could not be denied to any member.

Stettinius Alarmed

Gromyko first explained his position, presumably dictated to him from Moscow, at a meeting of the executive committee, composed of the 14 chairmen of the largest nations. He asserted free discussion in the general assembly might result in "an invasion of a state's sovereignty."

State Secretary Stettinius, in alarm, pleaded with Gromyko to yield. He noted that arrangements had been completed with President Truman to fly here next Friday and address the conference at a final plenary session on the following day, June 23. A prolonged argument on this new point might force cancelation of these plans, he said.

Name Emergency Group

An emergency subcommittee, composed of Stettinius, Gromyko, and Australian Foreign Minister Evatt, was then appointed and went into a huddle. Gromyko continued to demand reconsideration of that portion of the charter, given committee approval nearly three weeks ago, which gives the assembly the right freely to discuss and make recommendations concerning all international affairs whether they concern world peace and security or not.

Evatt grimly renewed his threat to reopen a fight on the veto power of the Big Five—United States, Great Britain, Russia, China, and France—if Russia insists upon curbing general assembly powers.

The trio went before the steering committee, consisting of the chairmen of the 50 member nations, and the argument continued. No progress being made, they resumed their discussion at afternoon and night meetings, the last beginning at 10:30 p. m. Chicago time.

Call Situation Serious

Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] of the American delegation and John Foster Dulles, an adviser, assisted Stettinius in the negotiations. Both said the situation was serious.

Gromyko stubbornly insisted the debating power being given the assembly was "far too broad." Discussion and recommendations in the "lower house" of the organization, he said, should be confined to matters affecting the maintenance of peace and security.

"The seeming liberalism of this provision contains a danger to the effective working of the organization," he declared.

Warns of the Danger.

"Any member of the organization which does not like anything one of its neighbors does, even something perfectly lawful, could bring the matter up in the general assembly for discussion. This would be an invasion of a state's sovereignty. The discussion might strain the relations between countries and injure the purposes of the organization."

Gromyko granted the right of the assembly to discuss disputes involving a threat to peace and make suggestions for their solution.

"But there is no reason to insert at this point in the charter any greater power," he asserted. "Some delegates held that the purpose of giving the wider power of discussion was to prevent conditions arising that could endanger peace and security. There are other provisions in the charter to give the members adequate power to discuss other matters, such as the provision for the consideration of economic and social matters."

Evatt Is Bitter

Evatt, spokesman for the small nations in many quarrels at the conference with the Big Five, was bitter in his reply. The committee dealing with the subject had reached a decision in principle as long ago as May 18, he noted, and on May 29, voted 27 to 11, more than a two-thirds majority, for full discussion and a wide range to the power of recommendations.

"You made no formal move for reconsideration until yesterday," he accused Gromyko, "when the final report was being drafted for submission to an open commission meeting. This action would reopen the whole issue and require a renewal of broad debate."

Evatt asked Gromyko if it would be satisfactory to Russia to include the charter's chapter forbidding intervention in domestic matters with the paragraph on the general assembly's powers. This should answer Russia's claim about "invasion of state sovereignty," he remarked. Gromyko gave a blunt "no" to this suggestion.

Stettinius then suggested the appointment of the subcommittee of himself, the Russian, and Australian. The executive committee gladly accepted this proposal. The steering committee, consisting of the chairmen of all 50 delegations, had meanwhile assembled in secret session on the second floor of the veterans memorial building and the subcommittee of three appeared before it.

"This room," said Evatt, firmly, "is going to be famous some day as the scene of the fight to make the general assembly the town meeting of the world. Already, it is being called Madison Square Garden."

Victor Andrade of Bolivia, chairman of the general assembly committee, spoke in defense of his group's work. He said he felt the committee had reached a perfect equilibrium between the powers of the general assembly, on which all nations are represented, and the security council, on which only the Big Five and six small nations are represented.

"I appeal to the representative of Russia to trust the small nations which have worked so hard to write the charter," he said to Gromyko, whose expression was grim. "Why cannot you trust them not to bring up and matters for discussion which would be harmful to the organization?"

Several other delegation chairmen wanted to be heard but Ambassador Halifax of Great Britain said he thought it would be best to let the members of the subcommittee "get to grips" with the problem as soon as possible and to wish them luck. So the steering committee retired and the subcommittee went to the Stettinius penthouse in the Fairmont hotel to begin negotiations over lunch.

After 1 hour and 15 minutes of discussion, this meeting also broke up with "no progress" reported, and the would-be peacemakers adjourned their session until later tonight. The Big Five, meanwhile, scheduled a night meeting on a subject said to be unrelated to the "free discussion" argument.

CANADA BUSY BUILDING FORCE FOR PACIFIC WAR

Vets to Train with U. S.; 27,500 Now in Unit

BY ARTHUR EVANS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OTTAWA, Ont., June 17—Canada's preparations to send troops to fight Japan are the chief war interest now in the dominion. Canadians say that the interests of their nation and the United States are closely bound in the Pacific, and that the dominion has a score of its own to settle with Japan.

Among service men and civilians one hears hopes expressed that the Canadian forces may get a chance to avenge the Hong Kong disaster that befell Canadian soldiers in 1941 shortly after Pearl Harbor.

Prime Minister King emphasizes that the 30,000 volunteers to be sent to the Pacific represent the largest force the United States said at the Quebec conference could be integrated with American forces in the time at disposal. Canada expects its force to be as battle toughened and experienced as any ever sent out of the country.

Off to Inspect Camps

Maj. Gen. Bert M. Hoffmeister, commanding officer of Canada's Pacific ground force, who arrived here this week, is on his way south to inspect camps at which the Canadians will receive their final training with United States army groups. The troops from the dominion are to operate under United States army command, but will retain their Canadian identity.

They will use United States weapons and equipment, but will wear Canadian uniforms and insignia. American steel helmets will be worn to avoid confusion in battle. The bucket type helmet also is more adaptable to conditions in the Pacific.

Some 27,500 troops in Europe and Britain have enlisted, with prospects that the whole force may be recruited overseas. After their 30 day leave in Canada, headquarters will be opened at Brockville, about Aug. 1, and by early September they are expected to reach the concentration area in the United States for intensive training in methods of war against the Japanese.

Prime Minister King said that under Gen. Hoffmeister, who in civilian life is a Vancouver lumber salesman, the Pacific force "will write a new chapter in the common history of the United States and Canada."

180,000 Men Required

Estimates today were that, including replacements and reenforcements and other service branches, 180,000 men will be required in uniform.

The Canadian navy is to send 60 war vessels, aircraft carriers, cruisers, anti-aircraft ships, fleet destroyers and frigates into the war against Japan. A seagoing personnel of about 13,500 will be required in addition to those who serve ashore in Canada to support the fleet. It will operate under British command.

The dimensions of the Canadian force, which will serve under Air Vice Marshal C. M. [Black Mike] McEwen, has not yet been announced. It will serve as a component of the royal air force in the Pacific. Air Vice Marshal G. O. Johnson, commander of the R. C. A. F., is now flying to Ottawa for conferences.

Meanwhile it is announced that Canada's force of about 25,000 in the army of occupation will be commanded by Maj. Gen. Chris Vokes of Kingston, who headed the 1st division in Italy and the 4th armored division in northwestern Europe. It will operate under the command of Field Marshal Montgomery, who heads the British occupational force. The zone of Canadian occupation will be in northwestern Germany, centering at Hamburg.

First Draft Sails Home

Other Canadian forces in Holland, Belgium, and France are expected to be withdrawn to the British Isles as rapidly as possible.

The first draft of 5,000 Canadians sailed from Scotland a few days ago. It is estimated it may take a year to bring all Canada's soldiers from Europe, but that all four or five year men will be home by Christmas. Some have been overseas since December, 1939.

EXPECT PERKING UP OF BRITAIN'S ELECTION DRIVE

Parliament's Closing May End Doldrums

BY E. R. NODERER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, June 17—With the closing of parliament British politicians are expected to jazz up their campaigning for the July election which so far has not aroused the public to any great pitch of enthusiasm.

Some observers believe this is because there has been an absence of positive proposals put before the voters in specific enough form for them to get their teeth into.

The weekly Economist says despite the best the politicians have been able to do to stir up excitement, "available evidence would seem to show a popular response is lacking; the British public isn't very interested."

Agree on Foreign Policy.

With the three major parties agreeing in principle on foreign policy, the main issues will be the extent to which Britain in the future will be subject to governmental controls and nationalization of industry and business.

In foreign affairs Conservatives, Laborites, and Liberals all subscribe to:

1. World security council as envisaged by the San Francisco conference.
2. Anglo-American-soviet unity in international affairs.
3. Continuation of the war against Japan.

This isn't to say there is no difference in degree of emphasis on the various aspects of foreign policy. Labor would place more emphasis on Anglo-soviet unity, while the Conservatives regard Anglo-American unity and continued American support for British policy in the middle and far east, in the Balkan countries, and the Adriatic as of primary importance.

Economic Policies

In home affairs from the two documents issued by the Conservatives [12 point platform and Prime Minister Churchill's statement outlining policy] their economic policy may be summarized as follows:

1. Removal of controls from industry so prices and wages can find their own levels.
2. Continuation of government spending to counteract any fall in private investment and thus provide full employment.
3. Subsidies to industry and agriculture to enable them to compete against other countries in export and home markets.
4. Closer empire unity in trade.

Housing a Chief Issue

In housing, which will be one of the main election issues, the Conservatives propose to build a maximum but unspecified number of houses. They advocate building by private industry and oppose control of land values.

Labor policy is outlined in a campaign document entitled "Labor Looks to the Future," and party conference resolutions.

Labor stands for:

1. Nationalization of fuel, power, inland transport, iron and steel industries, and the Bank of England.
2. Control credit of private banks and insurance companies thru an investment board.
3. Compulsory sales of land to local government authorities.
4. Retention of government controls to avoid a scramble for materials by competing industries.
5. Full employment and social security on the basis of the Beveridge report.
6. Fostering empire trade.

The Liberals, who policy has been outlined in a statement by their party leader, Sir Archibald Sinclair, have accepted the main parts of the Labor program. They have announced they would:

1. Nationalize industry where necessary but reject nationalization as a major principle.
2. Return to free trade with no subsidies and no empire trade bloc.
3. Foster social security and full implementation of the Beveridge plan.

We Don't Want Bond Money!

An abiding and heart-felt conviction of the House of Seagram echoes in these candid words, given public expression again and again down through the years:—

"Liquor is a Luxury."

We don't want to sell whiskey to anyone who buys it at a sacrifice of the necessities.

As we have said so many times in the past: "We Don't Want Bread Money!"

And, just as certainly today: "We Don't Want Bond Money!"

For War Bonds, in highest truth, are a necessity of life—the life of this nation, which is still so many grim, foxholed miles from total victory.

More, they are a guaranty of life—the secure, prosperous, happy life of every one of us in an inflation-free, peacetime America.

This should be indelibly etched upon the mind of every thinking person. And, only after the utmost Bond purchase that conscience and common sense demand, should one feel free to enjoy such goodly luxuries as fine whiskey.

This we feel honor bound to say. We could not look at our service flag and say less.

REMOVE BODIES OF 2 FREDERICKS AND HINDENBURG

Yanks Find Remains in Nazi Hiding Place

WIESBADEN, Germany, June 17 (AP)—The bodies of Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg, former president of Germany, Frederick the Great, and Frederick Wilhelm I., as well as Hindenburg's wife have been removed from a secret nazi underground shrine at Bernterode near Mulhausen where they were found last April 27 by a six man detail of the United States 350th ordnance depot.

The removal was so secret that the American troops handling the caskets got the impression that they were handling Hitler's body.

With the bodies was a vast treasure horde of imperial jewels, crowns, historic Prussian battle flags, state seals and other paraphernalia of ancient and departed German glory.

The cache was discovered by Americans while they were searching for an underground ammunition storage vault. They saw fresh mortar signs on the wall and investigation led to the hidden flag-banked shrine.

Named in Crayon

An officer representing the fine arts branch of the military government said that the names of the occupants had been labeled on each casket with red crayon.

The Nazis had lavishly decorated the casket of Frederick Wilhelm I., "the soldier king," with red silk ribbons, swastikas and other nazi symbols in the name of Hitler. Hitler is presumed to have once decorated the casket himself.

The bodies of both Fredericks were removed from the garrison church at Potsdam. When the Russians moved into Prussia the Germans announced that the remains of Hindenburg and his wife had been withdrawn from the path of the war but they did not state where they had been placed.

French Saw Deposit

French workers employed in the underground salt mines where the shrine was found said the Germans had deposited the caskets and treasure there with great secrecy about March 16.

Among the collection was a short sword presented by Pope Pius II. to Kurfest Albrecht Achilles in 1406 and an "Adam and Eve" painting which is believed to have come from the Uffizzi palace in Florence.

No official explanation for the withholding of the announcement of the discovery for so long could be obtained. Unofficially, however, the delay was believed to have been influenced by a "premature" announcement of a nazi gold bullion cache which had been discovered by elements of Gen. Patton's 3d army in a salt mine early in April. The no security was involved repercussions followed immediately and some army officers who figured in the release of the story were penalized.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by GAIL COMPTON

June 17, 1945

THE oats are heading out at the Fox river farm. One stalk picked at random had 44 kernels on it. Work will start to pile up rapidly now. The corn must be cultivated, then the hay will be ready to harvest, and finally the oats will be ripe.

The manager plans to give his corn fields one cultivation before he turns to the hay. Already 40 acres have been cultivated. When the ground is dry enough, six tractors will move out with cultivators. The first time around, the men will be able to cover about 60 acres a day. They must travel slowly as the corn is barely above ground and it requires careful driving to avoid harming the sprouts. After the grain is well up the six tractors will cover 120 acres a day.

Wait for Alfalfa

The alfalfa is about ready to cut, but the manager will wait a while before starting. This is because the alfalfa is seeded down with timothy which needs another week's growth at least. The combination of alfalfa and timothy in one field is a pet project of the manager. He believes the two make the best hay.

When cured the hay can be fed readily to young animals without fear of bloating them. Sometimes alfalfa hay proves a little strong for young animals to take and the timothy serves to dilute it. The addition of timothy to the alfalfa in the field also gives a very heavy yield of forage, the manager says.

The first cutting contains both alfalfa and timothy. The second hay crop comes up as almost straight alfalfa. The manager does not take a third cutting from the fields. The fields then are used for pasture. In the fall the timothy sprouts again, so the third crop is mainly alfalfa with a light scattering of timothy. This makes good pasture and helps prevent bloat. The pastures are seeded with 12 pounds of alfalfa and six pounds of timothy to the acre.

New Hay Chopper

The manager, with one of his neighbors, has purchased a field hay chopper. This machine can be used for chopping hay in the field or chopping corn for silage. It harvests the corn, cuts it up and blows it into a truck traveling alongside of it. Then the truck takes the silage to the silo where it is blown in. The machine will save a good deal of labor.

Efforts are being made to get a cutter for the Wheaton farm. One is needed to chop the hay which will be cured in the barn with the new hay drier.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

GARDENERS growing potatoes now are seeing flea beetles, the first of three major potato pests, on the foliage. These tiny beetles also are damaging tomato leaves and eggplants in the Wheaton farm gardens. The beetles are black, about the size of a pinhead, and make many tiny perforations in the leaves. Unless checked, they can seriously damage the foliage of all three vegetables.

Rotenone dust is most effective against flea beetles, and can safely be used on any vegetable because it is nonpoisonous to humans. The farm gardener is using a commercially packaged liquid spray containing rotenone against flea beetles on the potatoes and eggplants.

Later in the season he will use a spray of two tablespoonfuls of arsenate of lead and the same amount of bordeaux mixture in a gallon of water to control all three of the potato insects—flea beetles, potato beetles, and leafhoppers. Neither of the latter two insects has yet been noticed in the garden.

'DONUT' QUEEN OF U. S. O. IS HERE TO AID 2 DRIVES

Miss Alice Marie Casey, 20, who hails from Parsons, Kas., came to the city last night to display her three titles and her charm in the interest of war bond sales and the Salvation Army.

Miss Alice Marie Casey

Miss Casey is: [1] The most typical canteen hostess. [2] No. 1 donuteer of the nation. [3] Donut queen. The spellings "donuteer" and "donut" are her own. She won all three honors in a contest with 20,000 other "donut" minded young U. S. O. hostesses.

Today Miss Casey will be at State and Madison sts. at noon. She will: 1. Give real "donuts" to war bond purchasers. 2. Sell paper "donut" tags for the Salvation Army as a preview of a city-wide sale by 4,500 volunteers on Tuesday. 3. Stand in front of a "donut" 6 feet high.

On Tuesday she will appear on a radio network and sell more tags to aid the needy.

SYRIAN VILLAGE CROWD SLAYS 2 FRENCH OFFICERS

BEIRUT, Lebanon, June 17 (AP)—British headquarters said that two French officers were murdered by villagers today at the village of Idlib in Syria between Aleppo and Latakia. The British said the Frenchmen were attacked after they had appealed in vain to a squadron of levies who wished to quit the French army. The officers went to Idlib without informing the British and without escort, headquarters said.

STATE TO BOOST WAR BOND SALES BY 80 MILLIONS

Sales in the Mighty 7th war loan drive gained impetus yesterday as the Chicago and Cook county war loan committee outlined plans for the "Let's Finish the Job" phase of the campaign to fulfill the $171,146,000 quota by June 30. The state of Illinois will buy 80 million dollars' worth of bonds today as its contribution to the drive.

Lawrence F. Stern, chairman, called for renewed emphasis on sale of the E issue, or people's bonds, to "help combat the ever-present threat of inflation." He said today will open the sale of corporate or market issues for corporations and other large investors.

Treasury events to spur rallies will include a women's program at noon today at Madison and States sts. and the fourth of a series of "Here's Your Infantry" shows tonight at the Roosevelt High school, Kimball and Wilson avs. Halsted st. from 78th to 79th sts. will be closed from 1 to 4 p. m. Wednesday for the show.

CZECHS TO TRY DR. HACHA AS WAR CRIMINAL

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, June 17 (AP)—Dr. Emil Hacha, former nazi puppet president of Czechoslovakia, was notified by the Czech government today that he will have to stand trial in the People's court as a war criminal on charges of collaboration with Germany.

Dr. Emil Hacha

The court said it had completed preliminary inquiries on which the charges are based and declared that 76 year old Hacha would be shown no consideration because of his age or occasional protests against German measures.

The announcement said all other Czech leaders who had served in the German protectorate government would be tried.

HOW WE GOT WHERE WE ARE

II.

We have seen that the foreign policy of the United States in the early years of the New Deal was in fairly close accord with the will of the people to avoid war. Hitler came to power at almost the same moment that Mr. Roosevelt did. The league failed to keep the peace in Ethiopia and Hitler re-militarized the Rhineland, but there was no talk of war in Washington or in the country.

The neutrality law was actually strengthened in May of 1937. In October Mr. Roosevelt began to move away from it in his Outer Bridge speech in Chicago, recommending the quarantine of aggressors. The complete break came after Hitler's seizure of Austria in March, 1938. On March 17 Secretary Hull, denouncing the rising tide of lawlessness in the world, declared: "Those who contend that we can and should abandon and surrender principles in one-half of the world clearly show that they have little or no conception of the extent to which situations and developments in any part of the world today inevitably affect conditions in other parts of the world."

In contrast, Lord Halifax, two months later, stated in parliament: "You have to choose between the unpractical devotion to the high purpose that you know you cannot achieve except by a war you do not mean to have and the practical victory for peace that you can achieve." Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull were not only far ahead of the British; they were even farther ahead of their own people.

Munich came in the closing days of September in that year, and at the opening of 1939 Mr. Roosevelt denounced the neutrality act as a failure in his message to congress on the state of the Union. Nevertheless, a month later he still asserted that the foreign policy of the United States was "against entangling alliances, obviously." On March 15 Hitler took what was left of Czechoslovakia and five days later Lord Halifax repudiated his statement of the last year, in telling the lords that "His majesty's government have not failed to draw the moral from these events." In May George and Elizabeth of England came to visit at the White House and eat hot dogs on the lawn at Hyde Park, and in the same month Secretary Hull urgently recommended to congress the repeal of the arms embargo act.

The test of our neutrality policy was drawing close, but the administration had no intention of testing it. When Hitler struck in Poland the President's proclamation of neutrality reflected the obvious reluctance with which it was issued ["... but I cannot ask that every American remain neutral in thought as well"].

Congress could be prevailed upon to relax the neutrality act only so far as passing the cash and carry act, which required belligerents to take title to munitions in this country and carry them across the ocean in their own ships. The house of Morgan was barred by the Johnson act from again acting as the British financial agent in this country. Secretary Morgenthau was assigned the task of procurement for Britain and France, a fact which became known only by inadvertence when a French test pilot crashed in an American military plane at a west coast factory. Thru the "sitzkreig" period of the winter and spring of 1939-'40 the British and French were not particularly avid to patronize the American arms factory that the administration had thrown open to them. Nevertheless, the period saw the American army air force stripped of part of its scant complement of serviceable planes which were "traded" to American manufacturing companies that they might, in turn, sell them to the allies.

Not until Paris had fallen did Reynaud of the dying French republic turn in despair and plead with America for "clouds of airplanes." With the equipment of the British army abandoned on the beach at Dunkerque our national guard arsenals were stripped of weapons which were sent to Britain, while in New England that summer 68,000 American troops, the largest number ever brought together for maneuvers, carried out their exercises with gas pipes labeled "machine guns" and trucks representing tanks.

That summer also saw the trade of the 50 destroyers which the British needed badly for convoy duty for American rights to bases off our Atlantic coast and in the Caribbean. Mr. Willkie, the Republican candidate, approved the destroyer deal. The Times of London thought it represented "an innovation in international law," but argued that the old concept of that law had become an anachronism in the world of Hitler and Mussolini.

In May, 1940, Tyler Kent, an American citizen serving as a code clerk in our embassy in London, was arrested by Scotland Yard detectives. He was convicted at a secret trial and sentenced in November to seven years of penal servitude. It was rumored at the time that he was put away because he knew of a secret message sent to President Roosevelt by Winston Churchill when he still was first lord of the admiralty. The message was said to have stated that if Churchill became prime minister he and Mr. Roosevelt between them could rule the world. The existence of such a message has been denied, but nobody has been permitted to interview Kent and, tho all excuse for secrecy in such matters ended with the German surrender, the records of the trial are still held secret.

That fall, in his campaign for reelection, Mr. Roosevelt uttered his "again and again and again" pledge at Boston. The day after the returns were in he announced that half our war production had been allotted to the British. A few days later Lord Lothian, the British ambassador, announced, in a shipboard interview as he was returning to this country, that the British were finding it difficult to find assets to pay for the arms they were purchasing in the United States. British foreign investments at that time still aggregated between 12 and 18 billion dollars. Harry Hopkins left for England on Jan. 6 the following year. When the British brought up the same question he met their representations with a cheery "Why worry?"

The answer was lend-lease. Congress passed the act that was to make America "the arsenal of democracy" in March. Mr. Churchill said "Give us the tools and we will finish the job." On April 9 we transferred 10 coast guard cutters to the British for convoy duty in the Atlantic. The same day we assumed a protectorate over Greenland.

[To be concluded.]

OUR RUSSIAN ALLY

The importance of the articles by B. J. Kospoth, describing life in eastern Germany under the Red army, can hardly be exaggerated. Here is the first reliable and connected account of what the Russians have been doing and how they have been behaving.

Until THE TRIBUNE began the publication of Mr. Kospoth's series, the world had no clear picture of what has been happening in the territory occupied by the Red army, stretching from the Baltic to the Adriatic, an area with a population of well over 100,000,000 people. Reliance had to be placed upon Russian reporting or on necessarily anonymous communications from the underground. Both were suspect.

Now we know, if not what is happening thruout the zone of Russian occupation, at least the pattern as revealed in Pomerania. The Russians are not only living off the land, with the result that stocks of all kinds of goods are being rapidly depleted; they are looting for the sake of loot, systematically. Even tho Mr. Kospoth had been held prisoner by the Germans and was recognized by the Russians as an ally, his watch was taken from him by a soldier of the Red army and the reporter saw this process repeated on too many occasions to leave any room for doubt.

The picture that he presents of the Red army is a memorable one. He respects the fighting qualities of the Russians but finds them a disorderly and in many respects an undisciplined force, rather poorly armed except for the weapons they received from America. Even when sober, the soldiers are likely to display a quick anger that is no less murderous for being childish. The civilians have reason to fear the soldiers' lust.

This first-hand account is, of course, at sharp variance with the myths that have been so carefully built up. Obviously, Ambassadors Davies and Harriman and the troup of Americans who attended the Yalta conference have deliberately deceived the American people regarding their ally.

Nobody in this country wants to go to war against Russia regardless of what she is and of what she is doing; but from that it does not follow that any good will be served by allying ourselves closely with a regime whose principles and practices are alike savage. We cannot imagine what the motives are of those who would place our country at Russia's service but surely they are not good motives.

THE NEW-RICH NATIONS

The united nations relief and rehabilitation administration is the international agency that was created in November 1943 to do charity work in areas of Europe and Asia as they were liberated from Nazi and Jap oppression. Food, clothing, shelter, and medicine were to be supplied to the victims of the war, and arrangements were to be made "for the return of prisoners and exiles to their homes and for assistance in the resumption of agricultural and industrial production, and in the organization of essential services."

The stated aim was to supply the kind of aid the American Red Cross renders to an area in the United States stricken by tornado or flood, or such assistance as the peoples of other civilized countries gave to Japan after the earthquake of 1923.

When there is charity work to be done, everybody is expected to contribute according to his ability. But that isn't the way that the funds for UNRRA are raised. Altho all humanity sympathizes with the suffering people of Greece, all humanity doesn't pitch in and help. Only the united nations contribute anything, and the gifts are only from such of the united nations as were not invaded.

Of the capital funds of UNRRA, which were placed at 2½ billion dollars, the United States supplied 1 billion 350 millions. This is in addition to lend-lease, and the aid given by our armies of occupation, which is not even recorded. Because other countries have failed to kick in to UNRRA, its capital is nearer 2 billions. All of the united nations were supposed to contribute toward administration expenses, but a number were slow in providing even their small bits. Tho $750,000 was asked of Russia for expenses in 1945, this amount as well as some past assessments of $1,300,000 were unpaid as of a few months ago.

As the war is over in Europe, the new rich among the nations of the world ought to be called upon to put something substantial into the charity funds. Countries like Sweden, Switzerland, Portugal, Spain, and Argentina, which profited to the extent of many billions out of the war ought to be solicited for some heavy gifts for the unfortunates of other countries. Some of the neutrals have engaged in relief activities but they could do much more. Nations which not only suffered no ill effects from the war but made billions out of selling to the highest bidders, who were as eager to deprive their enemies as to provide for themselves, seem to feel no responsibility for relieving world distress. They stand coolly aside and expect Uncle Sam to do nearly all.

Test Your Horse Sense

By Dr. George W. Crane

Select the answers which you consider best. The last problem counts five points. Then look for the correct answers below.

1. The only President buried in Washington, D. C., is Lincoln Wilson Washington Grant
2. A 700 pound western steer furnishes how much salable meat after it is butchered? 150 lbs. 280 lbs. 375 lbs. 590 lbs.
3. When it is properly fattened to 1,400 pounds, the same steer will yield 575 lbs. 650 lbs. 720 lbs. 840 lbs.
4. This failure to fatten cattle properly results in a loss of how many pounds of meat per steer? 135 lbs. 275 lbs. 365 lbs. 560 lbs.
5. Which one of these foodstuffs cost the least per pound at the average grocery store? Eggs Potatoes Bread Meat
6. Some creatures chew their food before swallowing it, while others bolt it in large chunks without any mastication. Try to distinguish between the chewers and the nonchewers listed below, placing a check mark under the appropriate heading for each. You deserve one point for each correct judgment.

	Chewer	Nonchewer
Rabbit
Turkey
Cow
Turtle
Snake

Score yourself as follows: 0-2, poor; 3-6, average; 7-8, superior; 9-10, very superior. [Note—The last question counts five points.]

WILD MAN'S ISLAND

The fighting on Borneo has reminded us of that great island's Wild Man, a character of American folklore who deserves attention from researchers. He was a saying, a popular song, or a circus side show freak of the 1890s—perhaps all three. Our memory of him is vague, but in our boyhood any one of eccentric behavior, uncouth appearance, or violent temper was likely to be called the Wild Man of Borneo.

* * *

Furthermore, his tradition persists. We asked half a dozen vintage Chicagoans if they remembered the Wild Man of Borneo; they grinned and said "Yes," but they could not give any account of his origin or career. They thought he was a circus prodigy, probably exhibited by P. T. Barnum. But we could not find him in M. R. Werner's biography of that impresario, altho the index cites many of Barnum's famous freaks.

* * *

Our notion is that the Wild Man of Borneo was the ancestor of Bosco, the snake-eater, who has exhibited his horrible appetite in thousands of side shows, carnivals, and amusement parks all over the land. Bosco was a complete fraud, of course, and also a dismal spectacle as he crouched, glowering thru elflocks, under a shabby tent or in a shallow pit, but he was never reluctant about pretending to chew a chunk of raw snake meat. He, too, has become a tradition; comic strip artists and dog owners often borrow his name.

* * *

The Wild Man is one of the reasons why Borneo used to be our favorite island. Another reason is Joseph Conrad's "Lord Jim." The final episodes of that fascinating novel of the East Indies seem to be placed on Borneo, altho Conrad calls it Patusan.

ORACULAR VERNACULAR

Give with the happiness, make with the smile,
You will be dead for a nawful long while;
So live today that you'll suffer no sorrow
If by some chance there should be no tomorrow.

If, when tomorrow comes, you should be poor,
You can remember your fun, that's for sure;
But if today all you do is to grind,
And there's no tomorrow—ah, Fate, how unkind!

If from today you are tempted to borrow
Much that is gay to prepare for tomorrow,
Here is a thought that should govern your act—
Tomorrow's a question, today is a fact.

Laugh with your loved ones and join them in fun;
Look with delight on each day as it's done;
Give with the happiness, make with the smile—
You will be dead for a nawful long while.

First Aid to Memory

Let ex-farm boys boast of country smells—animal scent of barns, harvest time odors, baking perfumes from a wood-burning stove. I remember another sort—small town smells.

At 7 a. m. I opened the family "Fair store" to sniff an overnight mixture of smells. Dominant was tobacco, pleasantly blended with peanuts. The acrid scent of printer's ink came from the news counter, also a slight stench of cheap magazine paper and binder's glue. I liked the paint smell of toys from Nuremberg, neatly packed in Iceland moss. Also the pungence of pine sawdust from the Black Forest, nesting marbles and china dolls. I recall the exotic scent of wrappings on oriental porcelain; I believed they smelled of opium and gunpowder. Bohemian vases came in woven jackets of sweet smelling straw; French and Italian ornaments in sweet smelling braided grass.

I liked best the smell of fireworks. Chinese punk, Golden Dragon firecrackers, and bamboo bombs had a tang of their own. Yankee dynamite crackers, skyrockets, and Roman candles were less romantic to the nostrils. Chiggers

POET'S DESTINY

I, who have chased the moon into the hills
And plucked at stars reflected in the brook,
Polished the sun upon my window sills
And shaped and rhymed them for my scribblebook,
Have never learned to curb the tide of wonder
That drowns my senses on an April night,
Or that an autumn morning bronze with plunder
Can make my pulses stagger with delight.
I, who have sped from cobblestones and granite
To find new paths where man has never gone,
Am kin to wind and sister to a planet,
A sacrifice before the feet of dawn,
For I know now my heart has taken root

The First Telephone Song?

At the Olympic theater in 1885, in a performance by the Royle Royce Comedy company, I heard Charles Horwitz sing the first telephone song. Its chorus ran:

Hello, Central, give me Heaven, for my mamma's there;
You will find her with the angels on the golden stair.
She'll be glad it's me who's speaking—
Call her, won't you, please?
For I want to surely tell her we're so lonely here.

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

M. C. writes: "My brother has been in the army for two years, one of which has been spent overseas. In his absence our mother has acquired a serious heart disease, chiefly as the result of concern over his safety. Her doctor believes it would benefit her health if he were stationed near home. Can you give me any information as to where and to whom I should write requesting that he be assigned in the United States?"

The army gives due consideration to distress cases when application for release or transfer is made by the soldier. Such requests should be supported by sworn statements from physicians and disinterested persons.

A. R. M. asks: "If a soldier who carries $10,000 national service life insurance is killed in action, would his widow get the insurance and a pension and how much a month on each?"

Yes. Payment on the insurance would depend on the age of the widow at the time of her husband's death. If under 29 she could elect to take either $55.10 a month for 20 years, or about $36 a month for life. If she is over 30, the payments would be somewhat smaller, but in all cases for life. The pension for a widow without child would be $50 a month so long as she remains unmarried. If the widow should be remarried she would lose the pension and the right ever to apply again.

PERITONITIS FROM ABDOMINAL INFECTION

MOST of us are familiar with the term "peritonitis" and have a deep respect for the disease which it represents. It means inflammation of the inner lining of the abdominal cavity—the peritoneum. This material lines the stomach, intestines, and parts of the kidneys, spleen, and bladder. Because the substance lies in folds as it envelops these structures, the total surface is greater than that of the skin.

It has an abundant blood supply and is thus capable of absorbing fluids and toxins. When irritated its capillaries dilate, bringing on marked congestion. This process sets up a discharge which may become so copious that it fills the entire cavity.

Bacteria rarely attack this membrane and, when infection develops, there usually is an associated disorder of one of the organs which it covers. The appendix is the most common offender. When severe, pus accumulates over the diseased part. Nature tries its best to protect the other structures in the vicinity by creating certain barriers, but if this fails infection is sown far and wide.

A peptic ulcer may rupture, causing seepage of the gastric contents including the juice. If the perforation is large enough, an entire meal may find its way into the area. A bullet or shell fragment may produce the same effect. These missiles have a habit of puncturing anything that gets in the way, doing no end of damage. Multiple openings result and the story of peptic ulcer is magnified several times. Anywhere from two to ten holes can be made and drainage of intestinal material may be profuse. Accidents such as these call for prompt attention, and for this reason abdominal wounds are among the most dangerous on the battlefield.

When peritonitis sets in, pain is usually intense, starting in the involved site and spreading gradually thruout the entire abdomen. Activity aggravates the agony altho some relief is afforded by bending the knees. The wounded soldier will seldom move and calls for help until picked up. This applies as well to the civilian who has a perforated ulcer, whether he is in his office or on the golf course.

Eventually chills develop and the temperature begins to soar. Vomiting is the rule. The appearance of the patient is typical. The face is pinched, the nose sharp, the eyes sunken, the temples hollow, and the expression anxious.

These cases demand immediate surgery to rectify the underlying cause. With the advent of the sulfonamides the picture became brighter. Prior to their discovery the victim had less than a 50-50 chance to survive. This can be contrasted with a recent report in which over 80 per cent recovered and, in another series, over 91 per cent. In these sufferers the drug was inserted directly into the abdominal cavity at the time of the operation. Penicillin has also been utilized.

Thru the use of these preparations our medical officers have been able to save many more lives than in previous wars. Furthermore the patient has a speedier convalescence, being spared months of disability. The outlook in ruptured appendix or peptic ulcer is improved strikingly by this management.

BILE LACKING

W. H. writes: In gallstones, why are the bowel movements clay colored?

REPLY

Ordinarily, they are not. But if the flow of bile is obstructed by one of these rocks, or is sluggish because of the associated gall bladder disease, the characteristic color of the stools is absent.

FACIAL PARALYSIS

J. L. L. writes: I have Bell's palsy on the right side of my face. What treatment is advised? How long will recovery take?

REPLY

Vitamin B has proved useful, but several months may be required before the condition corrects itself.

EYE HEMORRHAGE

A. I. writes: What causes a spot of blood to appear in the white of one eye? There is no pain.

REPLY

MENINGITIS

Fighter's Revenge

The warriors in the foxhole are beginning to have their slow but inexorable revenge on the home front. We are beginning to pay for the war thru the mouth. That canned meat so beloved by the American army, a porky variety that rhymes with ham but is not ham, is back in the restaurants and on occasional grocery shelves. One school of taste contends it is --AM that hasn't passed its physical. This school calls it civilian K-rations. Whatever it is, it looks like it is here to stay. We hope we like it.

Our own war time experience with it has been restricted to the doughnut counter downstairs. This is a concern that specializes in food in the raw. No foi-de-rols, no disguises, just plain, very plain food. Here the colloquy on those glorious days when the week's rations are in goes like this: "What kind of sandwiches do you have today?" The counter girl applies a sirupy smile and says slowly, withholding the final word until the last tantalizing moment: "Today we have --AM!" Here a paper thin slice of it, nestled between two papery slices of dry bread, is yours for 10 cents. Yum, yum. It's wonderful bread.

Elsewhere it is offered under magnificent aliases. A gentleman who gets around more than we do, J. R. Savage, editor of Balabanner, the B. & K. house organ, claims to have found it under five classifications. At Thompson's cafeterias it is "individual meat loaf." At Stouffer's loop restaurant it is "pressed ham on toasted noodles." At the Victorian Room of the Palmer House it is "cold cuts mayonnaise, chef's special." At Al Simon's it is "bologna on a bagel." At the Pump Room it is $3.50.

Moreover, dear public, it takes red points. Guess that will show you how highly thought of --AM is. Won't those 1st army veterans be surprised and happy when they get a good thick slice of it between their teeth again while they're home on furlough?

The Language

Jack Thompson, Tribune war correspondent home from Europe, tells of a group of American correspondents behind the Russian lines who became cut off from their party and were detained while their credentials were examined. None of the examiners spoke English so, aside from much food and drink, little was accomplished until a bright eyed young Russian second lieutenant came up. He had learned English in a Moscow school but had never spoken it to any one except a Russian. His first words were: "Take it easy, greasy. It's a long slide to home."

Calling Old Fire Helmets

Thirteen men in a firefighting section of an air service group, who call themselves the Unlucky 13, have just written this way asking help. They are scheduled to ship overseas soon. Their job is fighting gasoline fires of planes which crash. Their problem is helmets. The intense heat given off by the fires is, they say, more than the regulation steel helmet and liner can take. If only the steel part is worn, it retains the heat and becomes unbearable. If only the liner is worn, the heat causes the composition to bubble up and crack so that it is impossible to fit the steel helmet over it properly. What they now want are some regulation fireman's helmets. They feel that many old ones must be cherished in attics and closets. They not only need these, but will pay the shipping charges. [Note: Name and address will be given out by this department upon request.]

Good Enough for Grampa

Maybe you don't know that the motto [for employes] of Sears Roebuck is "Make Sears the friendliest store in town." This now is to be improved on. A bulletin has just been issued telling of the company's 1945 customer good will program.

"In today's mail," the bulletin stated, "you will receive posters and folders, 'Have Patience—Your Mother Had.'"

Thought you'd like to know that this is being sent to all Sears' retail stores except those in Seattle and Los Angeles.

PRESSURING THRU LEGISLATION

Chicago, June 13—Recently a Washington news commentator said the reason the Bretton Woods bill was passed by the house of representatives was a letter writing campaign by 45,000 persons, 95 per cent of whom, oddly enough, were favorable. He also said the treasury department had despaired of passage until the letters began to pour in. It would be interesting to know who wrote these letters and why. I will wager the writers knew very little about the Bretton Woods plan.

What kind of congress have we when it will permit its vote to be swayed by a high pressure letter writing campaign? We have more than 40 million voters in our country, so this looks like rule by a minority, and a very small one at that. It proves one thing for certain: The majority had better organize, and quickly, or they will wake up some morning with a new form of government. If 45,000 letters can put over Bretton Woods, how many will it take to put over Dumbarton Oaks?

SAVE THE NAVY

Chicago, June 12—Permit me to thank you for the splendid cartoon on the front page of this morning's issue of THE TRIBUNE by Carl Somdal.

This is most timely and in my opinion a cartoon of this character is more effective and far reaching than any editorial or anything else that could be written in bringing home to our people the necessity of maintaining a strong navy as a guarantee of permanent peace. The Navy League of the United States is putting forth strenuous efforts in this direction and we welcome the support given by such pointed and timely cartoons as this.

"LAND OF THE FREE"

Chicago, June 11—I have been wracking my brain trying to find something to send to my brother in the Pacific. Finally I dug up some dirt from the back yard and put it in an envelope and wrote "Land of the Free" on it and sent it with a box of cookies and candy.

It was a great surprise to know it was passed all over the ship, to officers and all, and was pinned up on the bulletin board. Try it. I'm sure your service man would appreciate it.

BLANCHE WAINWRIGHT

PICKET LINE ABUSE

Chicago, June 13—If union pickets at the R. R. Donnelley & Sons plant would only remember that the old men, young ones, and girls whom they constantly curse and ridicule, are the fathers, brothers, and wives of men who have given their blood, sweat, and tears in war that these men may still have the freedom to picket, they would be less abusive. It hurt me to see an elderly man who has lost his only son pushed about and called insulting names. These employes have just as much right to keep on working as the union men have to quit and strike.

Picketing is legal but intimidation by public insults and predictions of reprisal is not.

FREEDOM TO WORK

RELEASING GERMAN PRISONERS

Chicago, June 13—I read with great interest your editorial, "The Prisoners," in THE TRIBUNE of June 12. I had been hoping that we would have that problem discussed from the standpoint of what I think is the humanity of the American people when they really know the situation. You have stated it exactly as it seems to me.

I trust that what you have done will interest other editors to go along with you and with the people of the world that want to do the square thing. We surely ought to take into account that there must have been a multitude of the soldiers of Germany who were driven into the ranks to fight and who were as much against the whole setup by German leaders as we were.

I am under obligations for this fine editorial.

WHEAT ON THE GROUND

Chicago, June 11—In today's TRIBUNE there appeared an article captioned "Wheat dumped in field; lack of cars acute." If this condition really exists, can some one give me some plausible reason why race tracks were ever allowed to resume operations? If one were to sum up the transportation service requirements of horse racing for the entire country, I'll venture to say that it would be sufficient to relieve this car shortage for transporting the nation's wheat.

SOUND ECONOMY OF ICELAND SETS PACE FOR WORLD

Balanced Budget Is the Rule; Cash Plentiful

BY WILLIAM STRAND
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, June 8 [By air mail]—This island government today has probably the most substantial economy of any nation in this war torn world.

It is one country, for example, where the budget is balanced as a matter of course and where cash on hand is sufficient to pay off the national debt, if bondholders could be induced to accept payment for their securities ahead of schedule.

Its exports have increased from $10,850,000 in 1939 to $38,500,000 in 1944. Over the same period, the imports rose from $9,880,000 to $38,160,000.

The increased national income is reflected in budgetary expenditures of $2,925,000 before the war compared with $18,770,000 last year.

Difference Explained

The difference in income is largely in higher salaries and pensions paid by the government to keep pace with the increased cost of living plus an added public works programs and heavier investments in government owned business enterprises designed to increase the island's export trade.

Thus has Iceland made firm her financial position and has pursued accepted business policies in the midst of war. The island has never sought or received lend-lease aid. The most she did ask for from the other nations was payment for her goods in currency which could be used in trade to procure vitally needed products for her industries and her people.

Helped by America

Thanks to the United States, the Icelanders achieved this goal.

Prior to the war, the bulk of Iceland's foreign trade was with Great Britain and countries on the European continent. The total of the island's export trade in 1938 was $9,077,000, of which $1,850,000 worth was with Great Britain and $5,800,000 was with the European continent.

In the same year the exports to the United States amounted to $815,000.

Following the outbreak of the war, Iceland's trade began shifting toward North America. Britain, moving to war production and economy, was no longer able to supply grain and other foods, altho it continued to supply other types of goods for the first two years.

However, the island had virtually no dollar credits with which to trade on this side of the Atlantic, whereas it had abundance of pounds sterling in Britain which became increasingly valueless for purchase of needed civilian commodities as that country switched more and more to war production.

These British credits held by Iceland were in "blocked pounds"; that is, exchange restrictions in Britain prevented their being used in the United States for buying United States products, notwithstanding the fact that millions of American dollars were at the same time being ladled out to buy materials being sent to Britain under lend-lease.

Find Way Out of Problem

A way out of the dilemma was evolved by the United States and Iceland in November, 1941, in an agreement in Washington under which the bulk of goods exported from the island to Great Britain was purchased by the United States and paid for in dollars from lend-lease funds.

Iceland is almost wholly a fish producing nation. Its fisheries account for 80 per cent of the national income, and 93 per cent of its total exports.

At the end of 1941, the United States paid $1,500,000 for the Icelandic fish eaten by the British, and $31,000,000 for the entire catch of 1942 also sent to Britain. In 1943 the British paid 35 per cent of the total, in pounds, of course, and the United States paid the rest, its share still being $31,000,000 because of increased war time transportation costs.

Britain paid for the entire catch in 1944 but allowed 50 per cent of $18,500,000 to be converted to dollars. Now apparently getting ready to return to the post-war civilian markets Britain in the agreement for 1945, just negotiated, will allow only $10,000,000 of the purchase price to be converted to dollars for trade with the United States.

'HIDDEN VALLEY' ODYSSEY LIKELY TO END IN WEEK

Rescue Plane on Way to Pick Up Glider

MANILA, June 17 (AP)—The odyssey of the three persons who survived the crash of an army transport in New Guinea's hidden valley of Shangri-La may come to an end within another week.

This was indicated by Col. E. T. Imparato of San Antonio, Tex., chief of the 374th troop carrier group, who dispatched a rescue plane to New Guinea on the basis of latest information that the survivors probably were hiking toward the floor of a valley where they can board a glider which can be picked up by a towing plane.

The survivors are a WAC corporal, Margaret Hastings of Owego, N. Y.; Lt. John B. McCollom of Trenton, Mo., and Sgt. Kenneth W. Decker of Kelso, Wash.

Start May Be Delayed

There has been no definite confirmation that the long trek to the valley actually has started. Ralph Morton of the Associated Press in a story dated June 14, reported severe weather which prevented the dropping of supplies that day and which he thought might postpone the overland trip a day or two.

Imparato's last information was that the trip would begin June 15 and since then he has had no report to the contrary.

"It will take about a week to get the survivors out of the valley," Imparato said, "assuming there is no prolonged delay in their reaching the site of a glider landing strip."

Describes Stormy Trip

A transport plane from Imparato's command will practice snaking a glider off the Hollandia air field before undertaking the tricky assignment of picking up a similar craft from the floor of the valley. He asserted by the time the trio complete descent of the rugged mountain trail to the valley the technique should be perfected for this unprecedented rescue.

Morton said the supply plane on June 14 was unable to drop its cargo because of a pelting rain, high winds and treacherous clouds. Maj. George Gardner of Cleveland, O., who is in charge of aerial operations, brought the supply plane back home to its base after it climbed to 15,000 feet over the survivors' camp.

Morton, who was aboard the plane, reported:

"We climbed so high attempting to top swirling mountain clouds that we had to use oxygen masks. Our fingernails became blue and cigaret lighters burned feebly. It wasn't a comfortable flight."

The plane was piloted by Capt. Hugh Arthur of Elkins, W. Va., with Maj. Gardner as co-pilot. Sgt. Anson Macy of Jacksonville, Fla., was flight engineer.

German Wives of Greeks Interned by Government

ATHENS, Greece, June 17 [Reuters]—All German women as well as women from other enemy countries brought to Greece as the wives of Greek workers and hostages are being sent to concentration camps by government order, the Greek news agency reported today. Authorities are investigating whether the marriages can be regarded as valid before deciding on the women's ultimate fate. About 1,500 German, Austrian, and Hungarian women are in concentration camps.

FIND SLAIN GI, ARMS CACHES IN OCCUPIED ZONE

WIESBADEN, Germany, June 17 (AP)—The unsolved garrotting of an American enlisted man of the 4th armored division was announced today by the 12th army group and an army spokesman said United States units have unearthed two caches of weapons and a training schedule for young Nazis on "How to Kill Silently." The cache was found in the Alps 100 miles from where the soldier's body was found.

The body, with a wire wrapped around the neck, was found floating in the Danube river near the town of Abbach, just south of Regensburg. The arms-filled hideaways were discovered by units of the American 42d infantry division at the Alpine village of St. Ulrich in northern Austria between Innsbruck and Salzburg.

Medical examination disclosed the soldier had been dead for four days. An army report said he had been missing five days. His name was not disclosed.

Explosives and Bazookas

One of the arms caches contained explosives, machine pistols, German bazookas, and books of instructions on jiu jitsu, and how to blow up bridges. The second was contained in camouflaged quarters capable of accommodating 30 people.

The army was investigating the possibility this second cache was the hideout of 35 members of the 2d SS panzer division who withdrew from the division a few days before its surrender in order "to carry out an important assignment."

The murder of a British flyer last March 17 was solved with the confession of Joseph Azp, a German civilian from Eibelstadt, whose arrest the army also announced. Eibelstadt is in the area occupied by the American 1st infantry division.

Radio Patrol on Border

To keep tab on civilian activities, every person over 12 years old has been ordered to register with the allied military government. Registration is 75 per cent complete.

There are frontier patrols, too, policing the borders in radio equipped vehicles.

Provincial governments have been established in every province in the American occupied zone of Germany except Wuerttemberg, 12th army group headquarters announced today.

Seven Sentenced to Death

Col. W. H. Peters Jr., Knoxville, Tenn., said appointment of civil officials to responsible posts was proceeding rapidly. They include many important figures of pre-Hitler judicial and civil life.

One of them is Adam Stegerweld, former prime minister of Bavaria and chief of the Catholic trade unions. He has been appointed president of the district of Mainfranken.

Military government officials said general courts in the occupied zone have sentenced seven persons to death. Four of them have been shot.

IOWA SAILOR FLIES 8,000 MI. TO DYING CHILD

Waterloo, Ia., June 17 (AP)—Seaman 1st Class Richard J. Peel, 32, victor in an 8,000 mile dash against death from the Marianas, returned today to a tearful Father's day reunion with his leukemia-stricken daughter, Diana Lou, 3.

The thin, pale, blue-eyed girl, who has talked about virtually nothing but her daddy's homecoming since the Red Cross located him June 8 in a field hospital, burst into tears when the wounded sailor stepped on crutches from a plane.

"I came a long way just to hear you cry," Peel told Diana as he folded her into his arms. He left Saipan June 11 on an emergency furlough to see his daughter, then given "a week or two" to live by her physicians. Her condition has improved since he was located.

At the home of his wife's mother he met for the first time his 6 week old son, Richard J. II. The cablegram which carried the news of his son's birth also told him that Diana was dying.

POSTAL SERVICE SLOWED BY WAR, TESTS DISCLOSE

Letters Go East Faster than Westward

BY EDWIN KENNEDY

Postal service between Chicago and Washington, D. C., and Chicago and New York has been slowed by the war, a test completed by THE TRIBUNE showed yesterday. Twenty cities were included in the test and 480 letters mailed.

The results of the test to Philadelphia, Pa., and Boston, Mass., are treated today with Washington and New York. The results of the test to western and southern cities will be presented in other stories.

The test was conducted over a period of five days. Letters sent to other cities were dropped into a letter box in Tribune Tower and a different time of mailing was selected each day to cover the business day from 9:30 a. m. to 5:50 p. m. First class and air mail letters were dropped into the box at the same time. In like manner letters were mailed from the same cities to Chicago.

Air Mail About the Same.

Air mail letters sent to Washington showed little difference in the elapsed time of delivery in comparison with tests made in a similar manner by THE TRIBUNE in 1939 and 1941, pre-war years.

First class mail to the capital, nowever, took longer for delivery and both first class and air mail letters sent from that city took as much as four hours longer in the case of air mail and nearly nine hours longer in the case of first class mail.

1945	18:54	32:53
1941	19:08	32:11
1939	18:45	31:04
1945	21:04	37:43
1941	19:45	33:30
1939	18:00	28:54

In calculating averages for elapsed time for deliveries, mailings that may have lain in the postoffice over Saturday afternoon and Sunday were not included.

Much Longer to New York

Air mail letters sent to New York took approximately two hours longer than in 1939 and regular mail took nearly five hours longer than letters mailed in 1941. Air mail letters from that city took six hours longer and first class letters nearly 10 hours longer for delivery, on an average, over pre-war years. A comparative table shows:

1945	19:24	36:43
1941	17:47	31:17
1939	17:27	34:55
From New York	Air mail hrs.-mins.	1st class mail hrs.-mins.
1945	25:27	37:08
1939	19:00	27:15

The previous tests did not include Boston and only a limited test was made to Philadelphia. The recent test to Philadelphia, however, showed that first class mail between that city and Chicago was delivered in about the same time as in the 1939 test. Air mail to that city was two hours slower. However, Philadelphia had in 1939 an airport which is not now in operation. Air mail to and from that city is routed to New York or Pittsburgh and placed on a plane or put on a train.

Faster Times to Boston

Air mail to Philadelphia required 21 hours 45 minutes and first class mail required 26 hours 8 minutes. From Philadelphia to Chicago, the same types of mail required 23 hours 6 minutes and 33 hours 1 minute, respectively.

The elapsed time for delivery of air mail to Boston was 20 hours 39 minutes and for first class mail it was 34 hours 41 minutes. The delivery times from Boston to Chicago were 22 hours 7 minutes and 42 hours 44 minutes, respectively.

These figures show that it takes less time to deliver air mail to Boston than it does to Philadelphia, altho the latter city is closer to Chicago by some 300 air miles. The same is true of air mail from the Quaker city.

They also show that first class mail to Boston is delivered faster than the same kind of mail to New York, altho Boston is approximately 250 miles farther from Chicago. Postal officials explain that the large volume of mail for service men in Europe which goes thru New York has delayed postal service to some extent in that city.

Faster Service to East

The figures also show that both air mail and first class postal service to the east is faster than that from the east to the west.

Faster air mail service to eastern cities can be explained in part by faster plane service in that direction, due to prevailing westerly winds. This, however, would not explain the faster delivery of first class mail to eastern points.

Postal officials here believe that out bound mail from Chicago is handled faster by postal employes than that handled in other cities.

LEGISLATIVE AID VITAL TO LIQUOR REFORMS—FLECK

Democrats' Support Asked for Bill

Hopes of the Illinois liquor control commission for reforms in the selling of alcoholic beverages rest on house bill 602, Chairman Charles J. Fleck said yesterday. The measure is expected to come up for consideration at Springfield today.

Fleck said he hoped the Democrats would help pass this bill. It can't become law, he said, without the support of Sen. Richard Daley and Rep. Joseph Rategan, Mayor Kelly's spokesmen in the legislature.

Home Rule Issue Denied

Other legislation proposed by the state commission has been lost by the wayside, Fleck said. His battle to end the tie-in sales made clear the need for the passage of H. B. 602, he added.

"The preamble to the present liquor control act says its purpose is to promote sobriety, but the legislature never actually gave the commission enough control so it could further temperance," Fleck explained. "The act was passed under the administration of a former governor and in it the authority of the cities was jealously guarded.

"The home rule controversy, however, isn't at issue in consideration of H. B. 602. The purpose of the bill is to give the state commission power only to make rules and regulations, none of which would detract from the power of the local liquor commissions. The bill's passage would give us more distinct authority in dealing with wholesalers and distillers.

"Without an O. K. from Sen. Daley the bill can't pass. That's because of an agreement with Mayor Kelly, I am told."

Fleck Plans Ultimatum

Fleck said the state commission's agents will start their coöperative investigation with the office of price administration today in reference to the rum, brandy, and wine deals forced upon retailers and home consumers as well for a year or two past.

He said he plans an ultimatum to distillers and rectifiers to quit shipping the unwanted beverages into this state. He announced his intention of seeing to it that the wholesalers keep their word to make more of the better grades of bourbon and scotch available to the tavernkeeper and the public.

EVENTS SALUTE 'DEAR OLD DAD' ON FATHER'S DAY

Chicago dads were honored yesterday in special church services, club and organization meetings, and thousands of family gatherings in the annual Father's day salute.

A special highlight of the day this year was a drive by committees and organizations which backed Dad to GI Joe clubs in bond rallies. Bonds for men and women in the service were purchased at numerous meetings by fathers, mothers, and other relatives and friends.

Members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, all of them fathers of men in service in the present war, yesterday distributed cigars in veterans' hospitals as a gesture of friendship on Father's day. The distribution was a national project, and Gardiner General hospital in Chicago, Downey hospital at the Great Lakes Naval Training center, Hines hospital at Maywood, and Vaughan General hospital near Hines shared in the V. F. W. generosity.

WAUKEGAN NABS RECKLESS RIDER! HE'S ON A HORSE

D. Washinger, 48, of 29 Greenwood av., Waukegan, was arrested last night charged with recklessly riding a horse down Greenwood av. hill near the Johns-Manville plant.

Police said Washinger, riding the horse, was racing an automobile down the hill when he ran down Martin J. Durkin, 53, a Johns-Manville employe who lives in a company owned dormitory near the plant. Durkin was taken to Victory Memorial hospital where physicians said he may have suffered internal injuries.

GREETING TO IKE IN WASHINGTON ON W-G-N TODAY

Congress to Welcome Him at 11:30

BY LARRY WOLTERS

W-G-N and Mutual expect to present an eyewitness report of the return home of Gen. Eisenhower and his staff at 10 a. m. today. Gen. Eisenhower is due to arrive by plane at the Washington, D. C., airport at this hour. From 11:30 to noön the program from the joint session of congress honoring Gen. Eisenhower will be broadcast. Other local stations will be outlets.

On Wednesday from 12:30 to 12:45 p. m. W-G-N-Mutual will broadcast the official welcome of Lt. Gen. Walter B. Smith, chief of staff to Gen. Eisenhower, at Indianapolis. Gov. Ralph F. Gates of Indiana and Eugene Pulliam, chairman of the 7th war loan drive, also will be heard.

Jack Benny's overseas troupe assembled over the week-end in New York to get ready for a tour of France, Germany and other nations where American troops are stationed. With Benny will be Larry Adler, harmonica expert; Martha Tilton, songstress, and Constance Dowling of the movies. Benny is reported planning some changes in format for his show in the fall. During the last season it slipped in the ratings, some say, because Kate Smith was opposite him.

W-G-N will introduce a new audience participating quiz, show, titled Banko, at 4:15 p. m. today. It will be aired Mondays thru Saturdays, with Lee Bennett and Ed Cooper as quizmasters.

After nearly all arrangements had been made for the return of Norman Corwin in a series of original dramas as a summer replacement for Kate Smith on her 6 p. m. Sunday hour, the show has been postponed until July 3. It will be presented at 8 p. m. Tuesdays, instead of Sundays. Corwin asked for more time for script preparation.

Frank Sinatra, in Europe singing for troops, will return to the air on Sept. 5. Ray Noble's orchestra is filling in for the present. Starting July 11 the period [8 p. m. Wednesday on CBS] will be turned over for eight weeks to a serial, titled Casey, Press Photographer.

FATS SALVAGE DROPS SHARPLY AFTER V-E DAY

Waste fat salvage contributions in the Chicago metropolitan area have dropped sharply since V-E day, Mrs. Walter J. Kelly, chairman of the Chicago area grease-tin division, reported yesterday. She said collections last month were 35 per cent below those for May, 1944. She asked homemakers not to relax their efforts in saving and turning in the grease which is used for making medicines and munitions. Two red points and four cents are paid at meat markets for each pound of grease.

More than 14,000 persons viewed 28 modern varieties of delphiniums on display at the American Delphinium society's show in Garfield Park conservatory, Lake st. and Central Park blvd., yesterday and Saturday, officials estimated. First prize among the more than 2,200 plants on display was awarded to a modern, hardy hybrid which had two feet of leaves and a spike four feet long. The show attracted 6,500 persons Saturday and 7,500 more had seen the flowers yesterday afternoon.

MOTHER DIES AS TRUCK HITS STALLED AUTO

Mrs. Vera Kelley, 58, of 716 Sheridan rd., was killed yesterday when the stalled automobile in which she was seated on highway 20, a quarter of a mile west of the Dunes Park Indiana state police barracks, was struck by a truck driven by Lucas L. Lapekes, 31, of Kalamazoo, Mich. Mrs. Kelley, a widow, was organist for the North Shore Baptist church and was widely known in Eastern Star circles. She is survived by two sons, Eugene, and Sgt. Edwin, in Europe, and a daughter, Mrs. Muriel Stokes.

Clyde Medley, 41, of 15317 Broadway, Harvey, was killed early yesterday by a hit and run motorist at 152d st. and Vincennes av., Harvey. Medley, a gear company employe, lived with a son, Orville, at the Broadway address.

Mrs. Demetrius Stergion, 73, of 3810 Fremont st., injured in a collision of two automobiles Friday at Irving Park rd. and Clarendon av., died in American hospital. She was in her husband's car. The other was driven by Mrs. May Crawford, 51, of 3709 N. Halsted st.

FORMER JUDGE JAILED 4TH TIME IN LIBEL FIGHT

Monticello, Ill., June 17 (AP)—Former County Judge W. A. Doss was in the Piatt county jail for the fourth time today in his long fight against sentences for criminal libel and contempt of court.

Doss, who surrendered last night to Sheriff E. E. Lindsley, was convicted in 1942 and sentenced to six months in jail for libeling State's Atty. Carl I. Glasgow in his publication, the Liberty Press. He also was given a jail sentence for contempt of court.

He said he is preparing a new habeas corpus petition for submission to the federal District court at Danville this week.

A mittimus for Doss' arrest was issued last week after the Illinois Supreme court withdrew a stay order by which it had released him on bond, pending a hearing on a habeas corpus petition.

In the three previous times he has gone to jail, he was released within a few hours on habeas corpus petitions. He said he now must remain in jail until the federal court grants his release or until the state Supreme court acts on his petition at its September term.

J. A. FITZPATRICK IS ELECTED HEAD OF CFL 42D TIME

Members of the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday reëlected John A. Fitzpatrick, veteran Chicago labor leader and member of the Horseshoers union, to serve his 42d consecutive term as president. Other officers also were reelected without opposition in the Chicago Federation of Musicians' hall, 175 W. Washington st.

They are: Anton Johannsen, vice president; Joseph D. Keenan, recording secretary; Maurice Lynch, financial secretary; L. P. Straube, reading secretary; Christian Madsen, treasurer, and Peter Bookstahler, sergeant at arms. Members of the financial and legislative committees also were rechosen.

Thomas Haggerty, an official of the Milk Wagon Drivers union, was elected to the executive board. Gus Moline of the same union was chosen as delegate to the national AFL convention. Michael Delaney, Robert Stack and William Kowalski were elected delegates to the state convention.

NIGHT BLOOMING CEREUS UNFOLDS ITS 6 BLOSSOMS

A botanical rarity, a night blooming cereus with six flowers, was viewed last night by neighbors of Hans Besser, a florist, in his greenhouse at 15410 Page av., Harvey. Closing by dawn, the flowers will not bloom again, and in a few weeks will drop from the plant, Besser said. An aggregate of 19 flowers bloomed last year, Besser said. The plant, which is seven feet high, first began blooming three years ago. Sometimes known as "Queen of the May," the 10 year old plant bloomed for the first time this year last Thursday night when one bud opened.

DEATH NOTICES

In Memoriam

ANDERSON—David G. Anderson.
One year has passed since that sad day
When one we loved was called away;
God took him home, it was His will,
But in our hearts he liveth still.

ARREST MARINE ON CHARGE OF RAPING GIRL, 15

Four Held in Another Attack Case

Marine Sgt. Edward Kowalcyk, 21, of 1733 W. 18th st., was arrested yesterday after he was identified by a 15 year old girl as the man who raped her in an areaway at 1753 S. Throop st. early yesterday. The girl signed a complaint against him. He will be taken to the sex bureau today for questioning.

The girl told police she was on her way home after taking care of a friend's child, and that a man in uniform approached her at 18th st. and Ashland av., where she changed street cars. He threatened her, and forced her to accompany him to the areaway where he attacked her, police were told. She said he choked her to prevent any outcry.

Four Held by Police

In custody of police were four Negroes seized early yesterday after they allegedly raped an 18 year old Negro girl in the garage at the rear of 4312 Michigan av.

Those held are Emanuel Hill, 17, of 4415 Wabash av.; James Henderson, 17, of 30 E. 44th st.; Donald Harding, 16, of 4442 Evans av., and Elmer Storey, 16, of 57 E. 44th st.

The girl told police she was walking home after visiting friends when the men, whom she had known previously, accosted her at 44th st. and Wabash av.

They said they would escort her home, but instead forced her to the garage. Residents who heard her cries summoned police.

Four Others Await Trial

Held in the county jail under $190,000 bond pending trial in Criminal court on charges of two rapes and five robberies are four other Negroes. Victims in these cases were two white women, one a 17 year old telephone operator, and the other the wife of an overseas soldier who was stripped and raped in a lot at 65th st. and Sayre av.

The defendants are Noel Parks, 18, of 1221 W. 60th st., William Robinson, 16, of 5935 S. Racine av., Joseph Jackson, 15, of 6040 Elizabeth st., and Theodore Wiley, 17, of 6017 S. Racine av. Robinson and Wiley were accused in only one rape case, while Jackson because of his age was named only in the robberies. Their trial will open Friday in the Criminal court of Judge Harold G. Ward.

BOARD PLANNING REPLY IN SUIT ON RELIGIOUS ISSUE

Champaign, Ill., June 17 [Special]—The Champaign board of education will file a rejoinder next week to a Circuit court petition questioning its right to permit religious education on time allowed by the local public schools, John L. Franklin, attorney for the board, said today.

The petition was filed by Mrs. Vashti McCollum, wife of a University of Illinois faculty member. She describes herself as an atheist, asserts that religion is a "chronic disease contracted in childhood," and charges that the board's program of religious education is in violation of both the state and federal constitutions.

The program has been in effect in Champaign schools for the last five years with classes in charge of Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish religious leaders. Students are allowed, with the consent of their parents, to register for the classes representing their faiths.

HOLD INQUEST TODAY ON FBI SLAIN DESERTER

An inquest will be held today into the fatal shooting Saturday by a federal bureau of investigation agent of Russell M. Stamper, 26, of 6548 University av., an army deserter. Stamper was arrested as he drove a truck and trailer to a freight terminal at 2500 Taylor st.

Stamper seized Agent Scott Reardon's revolver, handcuffed him, and drove off with the agent in a stolen car. At 33d and Pulaski rd. Reardon snatched the revolver from the fugitive's lap, and in the struggle shot him twice.

Stamper was arrested in March, 1943, for draft evasion and deserted after his induction from Fort Sheridan on Feb. 10, 1944.

REPORTS LOSS OF $50

Bert Peterson of 7251 Dobson av. told police that he lost his wallet, containing $50 yesterday in the vicinity of 75th st. and Greenwood av.

THE GUMPS

UGH! I FEEL CREEPY. NO SOONER DID STELLA SEND THIS TO ME, THAN SHE DIED-
OPEN IT-QUICK! YOU'RE WASTING TIME!
HMPF. I'M STILL WASTING TIME- IT'S ONLY A RECEIPT FOR A SMALL PACKAGE THAT'S BEING HELD FOR STELLA AT 1570-47th STREET-
THAT'S A CHEAP ROOMING HOUSE DISTRICT-NEAR THE RAILROAD. SAVE THE RECEIPT, ANYWAY! YOU CAN LOOK INTO IT WHEN YOU GET OUT OF HERE-
AND THEN- LATER THAT DAY!
OH, MIN! HELEN PHONED! SHE JUST GOT A PARDON FROM THE GOVERNOR!

SMITTY

NO TRACE OF THE BOY HERBY, DETECTIVE?
NO, LOOKS BAD
NICE OF YOU TO CALL, DETECTIVE EMMY
DON'T YOU WORRY ABOUT YOUR BOY-- HE'LL BE ALL RIGHT
OH, I KNOW IT! I'M SURE YOU'LL FIND HIM AND BRING HIM BACK SAFE AND SOUND-- GOSH, THAT CAME OUT IN REVERSE--SHE CHEERED ME UP!

140 Millions Paid County in Real, Personal Taxes

County Treasurer Schlaeger reported yesterday that collections of real estate and personal property taxes had totaled $140,107,457 as of June 8. This amount is $86,439,239 short of the total year's extension of $226,546,696. Schlaeger predicted that collection of second installment taxes will come close to meeting the full extension.

FIELD'S TO SELL LIGHT PLANES, IT'S ANNOUNCED

The first department store "in history" to sell airplanes will be Marshall Field & Co., the store announced yesterday. The planes will be on the first floor of the main store and in the sporting goods department of the men's store. Field's has signed a contract with Park Aircraft Sales and Service, Inc., of East St. Louis, as exclusive Chicago area distributor for Ercoupe, a two passenger plane, beginning next fall.

The Ercoupe, which has a single control and operates much like an automobile, will sell for under $3,000, Hughston M. McBain, store president, said. Many persons have learned to fly the plane in five hours, and its makers say it is spinproof. The plane has a 75 horse power engine and a 500 mile cruising range.

Cruising speed is 105 miles per hour, and the plane will attain a top speed of 115 miles per hour, Field's said.

HOW TO GET A PERSONAL LOAN for LESS than usual Small Loan Costs

SMALL LOAN RATES ARE OFTEN TWO TO THREE TIMES MORE!

Why, for a $100 loan, make 12 payments of about $10.07 each, totalling $120.84 (which is $20.84 more than you borrowed) when at Merchandise Bank a similar loan would cost you only $8—on your signature only. And only $5.50 if with one co-maker.

Here you save at least $12.84 (that you might as well have in your own pocket)—or as much as $15.34, if you choose to have a co-maker. In either case, you SAVE nearly as much as two payments on your loan.

Made Easy For You

If you need a loan—or want to reduce present borrowing costs

For a 12 mo. $100 LOAN — At Usual Small Loan Rate, You Pay $20.84 — At Merchandise Bank You Pay Only 8.00 — YOU SAVE $12.84

For a 12 mo. $200 LOAN — At Usual Small Loan Rate, You Pay $39.52 — At Merchandise Bank You Pay Only 16.00 — YOU SAVE $23.52

Why Pay More THAN THIS LOW COST?

—there's no need to take time off your job. Simply phone us at Whitehall 4500, or write, and everything can be quickly and confidentially arranged at your convenience.

* Savings shown apply to "signature only" loans repaid in 12 monthly instalments, cost to be deducted in advance. You can save even more if you borrow with one co-maker. In either case, you save at least half of usual and lawful Small Loan Charges.

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ

Q. 1—You are South, have 60 part score and hold:

♠95 ♥74 ♦AK9653 ♣AQJ

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
2 spades	Pass	3 diamonds	Pass
3 spades	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Four spades. So far you have sounded as tho you were merely contesting with partner for the right to decide the parking place at which the game could be played. He has no knowledge that your hand will be helpful to him and this is the best time to tell him in case there is a slam. His spade suit is surely robust and a 10 trick contract should be safe.

Q. 2—As South you hold:

♠— ♥A5 ♦K109642 ♣AQ732

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 diamond	Pass	2 diamonds	2 spades
3 clubs	3 spades	4 diamonds	4 spades

What do you bid now?

A.—Six diamonds. While your partner's first response was not a very vigorous one his subsequent free bid at the level of four indicates that he had a very sound raise and apparently he liked the sound of the club bid. The hand will probably be a laydown, but at the very worst it should merely hinge on a finesse.

Q. 3—As South you hold:

♠AQ ♥K53 ♦J10 ♣AKJ1043

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 club	Pass
1 diamond	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two no trump. This is superior to a jump rebid in clubs for two reasons, first your partner may be unable to bid three no trump and secondly even if he can, the no trump would probably play better from your side. With a passing partner I would be disinclined to rely on an 11 trick contract.

Q. 4—As South you hold:

♠AJ9 ♥AQ864 ♦K1085 ♣A

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. This is a bit unorthodox since such a bid almost invariably shows four trumps, but no other suitable rebid is available. We cannot guarantee a game with this hand if partner's takeout was weak, but we would like to make a strong effort to get there. If partner has a light one-over-one response he is at liberty to pass and the hand should be safe at that contract.

Q. 5—As South you hold:

♠AJ964 ♥5 ♦KJ105 ♣Q93

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 spade	Pass
1 no trump	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three diamonds. Opposite an opening bid I would wish to insist upon game. If partner returns to three spades, I will bid four spades. If he repeats no trump, I resign. It will be noted that a new suit by responder is not a force after opener has signed off at one no trump. Hence the need for the jump.

Q. 6—As South you hold:

♠K4 ♥92 ♦J1063 ♣A10852

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	2 clubs	Double	Pass
4 diamonds	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Six diamonds. As far as partner is concerned your values are principally in clubs and yet he is willing to insist upon game. The trump holding, the king of spades and the doubleton heart are very important factors, not to mention the fact that you have the ace of clubs which he can probably put to use rather than later club tricks which would have no value to him.

Q. 7—As South you hold:

♠Q842 ♥K732 ♦AJ ♣A64

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 club	Pass	2 clubs	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. You have an absolute minimum, and any further bid by you would indicate a desire to go places. Partner will have at least four good clubs. If you are afraid to play hands like this, stop making short club bids.

Q. 8—As South you hold:

♠QJ ♥764 ♦AQJ6 ♣Q852

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
4 spades	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Five spades. The queen-jack of spades are very impressive, partner must have been counting on losing a trump trick. Then your diamonds are just the kind he can use.

Baby's Antics Give Parents Many Chuckles

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

If you've been reading this column for a long time you've probably heard me say that before. But every once in a while it's borne in upon me afresh. Babies surprise you so. They are unconscious little clowns. They make you chuckle or sometimes laugh out loud. Even if you've known babies before, each new one has some little trick all his own.

Even tho he's only 10 months old, for nearly two months our baby has been playing what looks like choo-choo car. Everything we give him he pushes around before him as he paddles vigorously around on all fours. A little round bottle, a small empty box, even an envelope or a footstool, as well as his little wooden toy on ball wheels has a fat little paw planked down on it and is pushed enthusiastically across rug and bare floor as he crawls. And he doesn't crawl the way his father did, but has a funny gait, as if he had one lame leg—which he certainly hasn't.

His days are so happy and his zest for living so keen that he isn't too ready for sleep; yet he has really a good routine and drops off without a fuss. But when a big front tooth was causing trouble—probably a real ache—for a few days he cried at bedtime. After a little—we don't let him cry till he's all wrought up—his mother gave him her down pillow in a fresh pillow case, just to see what would happen, for he adores to "swim" as we call it, on several pillows on the floor in my bedroom.

Well, he snuggled his face down in the pillow, gave an ecstatic wriggle, turned sideways, smiled beautifically, put his arms around the pillow and dropped off to sleep.

Well you can imagine a little about that. Modern ideas of a crib mattress are "firm and flat," but for months before birth a baby is curled up in a warm place close to his mother. It's not hard to see that a smooth soft pillow might be comforting and cozy and perhaps reminiscent, if you had a teething-toothache.

Benefit to Raise Money for LST Library Books

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph N. Friedman will open their home at 2940 Simpson st., Evanston, to the Musicians Club of Women this afternoon for the 70th annual benefit concert. With the proceeds the club will buy books thru the Chicago Public library to stock a library on an LST [landing ship, tanks]. Many vessels of this type are now being converted to repair ships which carry a crew of 300, and the men have to rely on the ship library for recreation. Among member musicians taking part in the concert will be Mona Redman, Ellen Lofberg, Wilberna Ayers Moran, Mary Pearce Wiemann, pianists; Marjorie Butler, soprano, and Peggy Hardin, flutist.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., June 17—Dore Schary, who'll make "The Dream of Home," is testing newcomer Roy Calhoun, who has star quality if I ever saw it. He's tall, dark, and an ex-prizefighter and ex-soldier with a medical discharge. Here's hoping he gets the part. . . . Sonny Tufts is back in town 15 pounds lighter. He looks much better, too. . . . Baby Peggy's husband, Sgt. Gordon Ayres, tells me Baby Peggy is finishing a novel called "Crown Fire"—all about forest fires. He's a writer, too—short stories. . . . It's not true that Gregory Ratoff walked off "Kitten on the Keys." He and George Jessel argued about a scene, went into Jessel's office, shouted out a compromise, and Gregory went back to work.

How Jerome Kern Does It

Want to know what song writers do when they get together? Jerome Kern and Irving Berlin talked for nine hours, and Kern told him how to cure his insomnia. Just tie a large silk handkerchief around your neck on going to bed—that does it. Kern says Irving is nothing but a blooming dynamo—even without sleep. . . . Charles Koerner tells me he still hopes to do "Sleepy Hollow" with Danny Kaye. If Samuel Goldwyn won't lend him, he has his eyes on some one of equal importance. He wouldn't give me the name. Even if Oscar Serlin does the play on Broadway, Koerner can still make the picture. Goldwyn's trying to borrow Clifford Odets from Koerner. . . . Susan Hayward is getting the big buildup at RKO. She's playing a romantic lead in "Deadline at Dawn," but said she, "I had to have twins before they'd let me go romantic. At Paramount all I got was slitches." Cheer up, Susan, I played slitches all my life until I became a columnist. Then I was offered the kind of parts I'd always wanted—and was too busy to make 'em.

All This and Unconditional Surrender

Wonder if our producers knew what a rugged trip they'd let themselves in for when they started overseas. Can you imagine—if a German sniped at our boys, and Col. Darryl Zanuck has to carry back Jack Warner over one arm and Harry Cohn over the other? Zanuck's used to flying, but many of the others aren't. Darryl told me before he left, "It will probably be such a love fest in the air that I'll come back with four or five important stars for my pictures." That I doubt. . . . Perry Charles, just returned from a hospital tour with Walter Pidgeon, tells me that they were four days going thru one hospital at Cleveland. Pidgeon talked with each boy as long as the boy wanted to talk. . . . Lauren Bacall is so happy she got Humphrey Bogart's breakfast at 6:30 the other morning. When asked what he had, she said, "O, a cup of coffee. That's all he ever takes."

Iturbi, the Musical Diplomat

Ezra Stone writes me that during Jose Iturbi's concert at March field thousands of men were present, and even a metal chair let out a four beat moan during his playing of "Rhapsody in Blue." When Iturbi came off the stage he said, "What a wonderful audience! So appreciative—even the chairs. That squeak was in key and on the beat." . . . Victor Borge topped himself at Russell Birdwell's cocktail party when he sang for some pals. He's so talented it oozes from every pore. Why Hollywood hasn't grabbed him for a picture I'll never know. When they do they'll say, "Where have you been all our lives?" He could quip back, "Just breaking records at the Waldorf-Astoria and elsewhere."

He Keeps on Flapping

Leonard MacBain, technical adviser on "The Stork Club," is keeping it in the family. Off office hours he's courting Noel Neill, who plays Jacqueline Billingsley. . . . Les Brown is recording a song written by Sarah Churchill, Winston's sprig. . . . The reason Mervyn Leroy will direct "The Robe" is this: Some time ago he was in San Francisco and was guest at a luncheon on the Saratoga. Sitting beside him was an army chaplain who told him every fellow on the ship had read "The Robe" not once, but many times. They were all eager to see it on the screen. When Mervyn arrived back in town he went directly to Frank Ross and said he'd like to do it. . . . I've had six letters in a week suggesting Ruth Warrick for the lead. . . . Charles Boyer, as a young actor in 1920, did his first play at the Grand Theater de Champs Elysee—"A Thousand and One Nights." In it was the famous leading man, Victor Francen. Now they're together again in "Confidential Agent." . . . Nigel Bruce's daughter, Pauline, a corporal in the R. C. A. F., blew into town to spend Father's day with him.

Thru the Looking Glass

This year, because the skies have wept so much, we have a bumper crop of mosquitoes. The wails of vacationers are long and loud.

This being so, we think it's time to give our annual reminder that there are mosquito repellents that are neither messy to use nor obnoxious to sniff. The men in the tropics use tons of the stuff, supplied by the quartermaster corps.

One of the repellents is an old timer. It works like magic for a great many persons. Others have reported that it is less than perfect, but we have a hunch this is because they don't apply it generously enough or over all the exposed skin surfaces.

This is a pure white cream with a delicate fragrance. It has no resemblance at all to the oil of citronella that used to be the home treatment. It's a fluffy kind of cream that won't injure fabrics, even the thinnest, most fragile of them. If you allow it just a few seconds to absorb it won't be sticky—nor will it be visible on the skin.

It's important, of course, if you want all possible protection, to apply this to the hands, the face, and the neck. The mosquitoes, who are for some reason completely allergic to this cream, will stay away from the creamed areas, but if you leave them a tempting, uncreamed bit of skin surface they'll dive for it—and the cream can't be held responsible for that. And, during exposure, it's a good idea to apply the cream more than once.

Fishermen are great fans for this cream, as are thousands of vacationers who spend their "two weeks with pay" in resorts where the little pests buzz around. It is utterly safe for use on the skin of even small babies. What's more, it also can be used to relieve sunburn—if you're lucky enough to find sun and indiscreet enough to burn yourself.

"COUNTER-ATTACK"

By Mae Tinée

He and Marguerite Chapman are a couple of comrades sent with a group to capture a German officer to get information necessary for an attack. The Russian troops are stymied at the edge of a river and know the enemy is massing troops and tanks for another big attack. The Russians plan to beat the Nazis to the draw by building a bridge just 18 inches under water. The underwater work is done at night. The Reds plan to shove their tanks across at the surprised Nazis when they learn just when the German forces are concentrated.

Muni and Chapman are imprisoned with their German quarry when artillery fire closes the entrance to the underground headquarters of the Nazis. None of the eight Nazis wears an officers uniform, but Muni decides one must be an officer. Finally, after much conversation and many tricks on both sides, he unearths a major who resumes his arrogance with his monocle.

The girl is wounded when a supposedly dead German comes to life, which leaves Muni holding the floor and the machine gun. Since there is a good possibility of death for all unless they are rescued—in which case death will depend on who does the rescuing,—captor and captive decide to trade information. Neither quite believes the other, but the Germans can sleep and Muni can't, and it's old Morpheus who nearly gets him in the end.

I can scarcely believe that a real Russian soldier would be so humorous and nonchalant with the enemy, —but some of the banter is quite interesting. The German major is well played by Harro Meller. Miss Chapman has little to do but lie on the floor in pain, altho she does that very nicely.

There are some tense moments altho there is more conversation than action. Mr. Muni looks quizzical, droll, and slightly idiotic by turns,—to me, it seemed like mugging. The bridge also seemed a bit shaky in theory, but I'm no army engineer, and don't have one handy to enlighten me on that point.

On the whole, I found "Counter-Attack" long, draggy, and unconvincing.

Lake Forest to Be Setting for 2 Weddings This Week

BY JUDITH CASS

INSTEAD of one interesting wedding in Lake Forest this week, that of Miss Mary Cornelia Aldis and Lt. Charlton Ogburn Jr., on Friday, there will be two, for Capt. Shaw McCutcheon arrived from England over the week-end, and will take Miss Nancy Wells as his bride on Wednesday. The ceremony will be a small one at 5:30 p. m. in the home of Miss Wells' mother, Mrs. Ellsworth Faris, and Dr. Faris, with a larger reception following.

The engagement of Miss Wells to Capt. McCutcheon of the army air forces, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. McCutcheon, was announced two years ago shortly before he left for duty overseas. Pre-nuptial entertaining for him and Miss Wells is being limited to two parties, a cocktail party which Capt. McCutcheon's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Clay Judson, gave yesterday in Lake Forest to welcome him home, and the bridal dinner, which Mrs. Russell Lord will give tomorrow night in the Onwentsia club.

Mrs. Lord's daughter, Miss Kathleen Lord, will be Miss Wells' maid of honor, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Thomas E. Wells, will be matron of honor. In the absence of Capt. McCutcheon's brothers, Lt. John McCutcheon Jr. of the navy and Barr McCutcheon, Pvt. David Baldwin of the army medical corps, a student in Northwestern university's medical school, will be best man. Lt. McCutcheon is in the Pacific, and young Mr. McCutcheon is in the midst of examinations at Harvard university.

Other Wedding News

These last few days before the Ogburn-Aldis wedding are filled with parties for the attractive fiancee. Miss Dudley Winston, Miss Sally Mitchell, and Mrs. Lester Armour Jr., have entertained at showers for her. Miss Barbara Bronson and Miss Ann Carpenter will give the spinster dinner on Wednesday night, and Miss Sally Robbins will give a luncheon on Wednesday. Miss Gwethalyn Jones is entertaining at luncheon on Thursday before the wedding rehearsal, and the bride's parents, Maj. and Mrs. Graham Aldis, will give the bridal dinner on Thursday night in the Tavern club. The dinner will be small.

Mr. and Mrs. Hermon Dunlap Smith will give a luncheon on the day of the wedding. Maj. Aldis arrived from Washington, D. C., yesterday to join his family in Lake Forest, and the bridegroom will come on Thursday. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ogburn, will be here from New York and will stay with his brother, Prof. William F. Ogburn of the University of Chicago, and Mrs. Ogburn. Also coming are Mrs. Charlton Ogburn's sister, Mrs. McCord Knapp, and Mr. Knapp of Savannah, Ga., and Mrs. Ogburn's niece, Miss Dorothy Lake, of New York.

The wedding, at 5 p. m. in the Aldis garden, will be attended by the families only, and a larger reception will follow. The Rev. Herbert Prince of the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest, will officiate.

Miss Ruth and Miss Peggy Aldis, the bride's twin sisters, will be her only attendants. Louis Halle of Washington, D. C., will be best man. Maj. and Mrs. Aldis are hoping that their son, Pvt. Owen Aldis, will be here from his army post at Coffeyville, Kas., for the wedding. After a wedding trip, Lt. Ogburn and his bride will be at home in Alexandria, Va., for the summer.

Debutante News

The name of Miss Mary Scribner has been added to the season's debutante list. If Miss Scribner decides to have a party it probably will be a simple one during the Christmas holidays in the Winnetka home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Scribner. The bud prepared at the Shipley school in Bryn Mawr, Pa., for Northwestern university, where she will be a sophomore. One of her sisters, Mrs. John T. Blossom Jr., is living with her parents while Maj. Blossom is overseas with the army air forces. Another sister, Mrs. William T. Kirk IV., is in Texas with her husband, a lieutenant in the army air forces. Lt. Gilbert H. Scribner Jr. is serving with the naval reserve in the Pacific.

The Elmer Jewell Dicks are planning a Christmas tea to introduce to society their daughter, Miss Nancy Dick. Miss Dick, a graduate of the North Shore Country Day school, has completed her first year at Smith college. An older sister, Miss Barbara Dick, has returned to Winnetka after being graduated from Colorado college.

Also planning a Christmas party are the Joseph O. Lairds of Evanston, who will introduce their only child, Miss Margaret Jo Laird, to their friends at that time. Miss Laird, a graduate of the Roycemore school, will be a senior at Pine Manor in the fall. She is attending the summer school of Northwestern university.

Engagement News

Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Tierney of Kenwood av. announce the engagement of her daughter, Miss Genevieve M. Chase, to Ensign John B. Tierney of the naval air forces, who is Mr. Tierney's son. The wedding will take place late this summer.

Miss Chase, who is called Jerry, is visiting friends near Banana River, Fla., where her fiance is stationed. She is a graduate of the Faulkner School for Girls, and has been studying art. Ensign Tierney attended Loras college in Dubuque, Ia. Four of the eight children of Mr. and Mrs. Tierney are in service. Gunner's Mate Volney O. Chase III., has been in the submarine service in the Pacific for the last two years. Lt. Dan L. Tierney of the army is stationed in this country. His brother, Sgt. Tom Tierney, is overseas with the army.

Service Notes

At home from two years of duty with the navy in the Philippine area is Lt. Comdr. H. Foster Straw. Following a short leave in Lake Forest with his family, he will report for duty at Great Lakes this week. Their daughter, Miss Barbara Straw, has returned from New York for the summer, and Jack Straw, who has been released from the navy following overseas duty, is in war work in Los Angeles, Cal.

With the exception of his brother-in-law and sister, Capt. and Mrs. Burke Williamson, who are in Columbus, Ga., all of the Kent Clow family is in Lake Forest to welcome Pvt. Kent Clow Jr., who arrived home on a 30 day furlough last week. Pvt. Clow was wounded while with the 7th army in Ger-

Tidying Up

A Chicago insurance company issued an attractive booklet last week to new and old employes. Office customs, salary regulations, acceptable standards of business conduct, and employe benefits were explained in it. It also gave a short history of the company and its aims.

The idea behind the booklet isn't new but it is one that many firms of considerable size have overlooked. It is of particular value at the present time. For many months office help has been at such a premium that well founded rules necessarily were cast aside. But the "anything goes" era is about over. Lax office regulations are being stiffened. We now are in the tidying up period when a friendly, clearcut statement of policy helps employer and employe alike.

Weatherwise?

When I'm wearing a blouse
Then it's sure to turn cool,
If I put on a suit

When I'm dressed for a storm
There's no cloud in the sky!
How I wish I were blessed

Straightening Things Out

It was interesting to read Poor Richard's observations regarding the WCG in his office who successfully adjusts the seams in her stockings to hide her bowed legs. Nice to know there's one young fellow not always watching the clock!

His observations remind us of the answer a congressman from Minnesota once gave when asked how everything was going in his state. Said he: "They are trying to pass a law up there that will make all the cross-eyed fellows marry the bowlegged girls. That way they think they will straighten everything out."

Zonta International Begins Four Day Meeting

The executive committee of Zonta International will hold a four day business meeting, beginning today, in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Miss Jessie Ekins of St. Catharines, Ont., will preside. This year the service organization of business and professional executive women was to have met in Syracuse, N. Y., for its silver anniversary convention, but plans for the large meeting were canceled. Among the board members gathering here will be Dr. Elizabeth Dist Dozier and Mrs. Georgia C. Boucher, both of California, who were Zonta representatives at the recent United Nations Women's conference in San Francisco.

Straw Clogs Designed for Cool Comfort

BY REA SEEGER

Ingenious footgear designers have contrived a lot of combined swank and summer comfort with raffia. This cool straw employed so cunningly in braided bands is used in some of the most effective summer clogs or play shoes ever devised for smart comfort. The added attraction of being unrationed makes them super-specials for any shopper despite the fact that the prices are somewhat high. However, they're made expertly, with soft beige tinted silky linings and with smart high fashion outlines. The heels are very high and of the wedge sole type. . . . The sole itself is a good inch in thickness to balance the extreme three and one-half inch height of the heels.

There are two braided bands over the instep. The upper buttons around the ankle and meets the back ankle band at the side. But it is the ideal straw coolness and the very smart colorings that make them so tempting. While the neutral beige affairs are ideal as an all-purpose color to wear with summer play and spectator sports clothes—as well as with simple day time dresses of cotton—the combinations are something to create shopping excitement. Brick red with beige, dull green with beige, and a stunning copper with beige provide the assortment from which to choose.

In the bag collections you'll find raffia handbags to match and to wear with the clogs or play shoes. These, too, come in beige neutrals as well as in the combinations of colors featured in the footgear. Both huge envelopes and the round bags carried with a shoulder strap are plentiful. The bags are somewhat less expensive than the clogs, even with the luxury tax added. The matched bag and clogs are sensational accessories for summer clothes, besides being the coolest of all summer accessories. And they don't require a lot of fuss to keep in spotless condition.

John Van Druten Stops Over to Talk About Plays, Ballets and a Cinderella Actress

John Van Druten went thru town yesterday on his way from New York to his California workshop, with a stopover in San Francisco to visit Kathryn Forbes. She must regard him as a man of magic because, by waving a playwright's wand in "I Remember Mama," he transformed her story about a Norwegian mama's nonexistent bank account into the bank itself and handed her one of the royalty keys.

Mr. Van Druten went east to see about cast changes in "Mama" and "The Voice of the Turtle," which may have Martha Scott as Sally when the New York cast reopens after holiday, and to talk with Alfred De Liagre Jr. about his new play. They hope to stage it in the fall, tho as yet it has no title and only a tentative cast. As for the story that Katharine Hepburn will do "The Damask Cheek" for the movies, that isn't certain yet. If she does, he suggests changing the locale to a western ranch.

He was particularly interested in the Cinderella story of Beverly Chambers, who takes over the title role in "Dear Ruth" at the Harris on July 2. He admits, tho, that telling it may start another avalanche of ambitious youngsters bruising their fists on the usually inhospitable doors of Broadway production.

Miss Chambers was just a pretty little girl who had never appeared on the professional stage when he heard her read for "I Remember Mama." He gave her a walk-on part and made her understudy to the role of Christine. Luck stuck by her, and when she got a chance to play the part, she made a hit. Offered a major role by "Dear Ruth," she didn't just turn in her notice and scoot. She asked if she could go, and not only got permission, but encouragement. Every one connected with "Mama" has gazed in fascination as she has grown up in the process of being glamorized for "Ruth."

Altho "Mama" was considered in the top rank for honors, Mr. Van Druten is satisfied with "The Glass Menagerie" as the winner of the critics' award and he thinks it deserved the Pulitzer prize, too, as a piece of creative theater writing. He didn't see "Undertow," Antony Tudor's ballet based on his suggestion, but talked to Tudor about it. Among other things, the ballet deals with childbirth, rape, and murder, and there were protests after the first performance from people who objected to having it in the Metropolitan Opera house. A solemn conclave was held. Just in the middle of it, Life telephoned for a picture spread. The meeting adjourned.

Incidentally, if you wonder why Tudor used Greek names for his characters instead of his usual, "The Man Who Is in Love with the Girl" or "The Girl Who Is Not in Love with the Man," etc., Van Druten asked him. He said he had to. Agnes De Mille took to calling all her characters "The Girl Who Falls Down," etc., and it was up to him to find a new racket.

Notes

The Theater Guild sends word that subscription renewals for next season should reach Harriet Watt, subscription manager, at the Erlanger theater, 127 N. Clark st., by June 30, in order to retain preferred seat locations. . . . Public sale of season subscriptions to the History and Enjoyment of Music series opens today at the Allied Arts corporation, 7 S. Dearborn st. . . . From Variety: "Giacomo Puccini is much in demand [for Hollywood operatic production] but has a $1,000,000 idea as the value of his works." I wish I knew how they get in touch with these people. I could write a far more interesting column. For instance, an interview with Chopin on what he thinks of "A Song to Remember."

Discussion on Race Relations Set for Woman's City Club

Means of collaborating with other member groups on the mayor's conference on race relations in specific fields such as housing, recreation, employment, and health will be discussed by the board of managers of the Woman's City club at a meeting called by Mrs. Harry Mulberry, president, for 10:30 a. m. today in the Fine Arts building. An afternoon book review program has been arranged for the entire membership by Mrs. Titus G. Le Clair, who will present Mrs. R. W. Dunn of La Grange. Mrs. Dunn's talk will be on Darrell Garwood's "An Iowa Artist," a biography of Grant Wood. It is planned to have prints of Wood's pictures on view. Mrs. Walter G. Hamilton's social committee will have the tea table decorated in Iowa farm fashion.

'The Wicked Mrs. Steel'

By Roy Vickers

(Copyright: 1945: By Roy Vickers)

VISITOR

Gillian Beynon had lifted her suitcase down from the rack at the last station and now looked out of the window as the train slowed for Tenstable. If she were lucky enough to get the job—well, she hoped it would be a cheerful town to live in.

There was the river again. It had looked charming two miles back, but now it was turning very commercial. She gaped at a huge sign: "Steel & Co., Wharfingers, Warehousemen, Bargebuilders."

Steel!

"Porter, miss?"

"No, thank you." She could manage the suitcase easily—for a dozen yards or so. She set it down to rest as the stationmaster came out of his little office.

"Can you tell me how to find Mrs. Steel, please?"

"You want Mrs. Steel!" exclaimed the stationmaster.

"Yes, the only address I have is 'Mrs. Steel, Tenstable,' and it seems such a big town."

The stationmaster glared. "I can show you where Mrs. Steel lives," he said, as if he were anxious to limit his responsibility. "Look! Over the valley. Up that hillside there. No, you're looking wrong—just to the left of the factory chimney, like. House standing by itself. That's it."

"O, that — that squat looking one? What is it called, please?"

"Well now that's a funny thing. It must have a name—the lawyers would see to that—but I'm bothered if I know what it is, tho I've lived here all my life. We always call it 'the house.' Never heard anybody call it anything else. Ah! That cloud means we're going to have another shower."

"No thanks. I think I'll walk."

The porter glanced at the low scudding clouds and winked at his mate. She was used to that kind of thing. She carried her suitcase to the cloakroom and with difficulty heaved it onto the counter.

The stationmaster went back into his little office. He had known Tenstable since it was a tiny market town—30 years ago. Its growth into a modern working town was due to Andrew Steel, a local man who, in the days before the motor car, was ostler's boy at the old Red Lion.

At 18 he worked his passage to America. At 28 he was back in Tenstable with a couple of hundred pounds in his pocket and almost as many ideas in his head—all for the advancement of Andrew Steel. At 38—two years before he married a beautiful girl barely half his age—he was mayor. At 48 he was the Big Boss. At 58—well, you might almost say that he was Tenstable.

There was hardly a single important business in the town that did not, directly or indirectly, belong to Andrew Steel. And two years ago Andrew Steel died in the early sixties, leaving his entire property to his wife.

"Any one! Which one? Or does it mean the lot?"

"It does not mean the—er—lot. It means that only one person can inherit on Mrs. Steel's death. She has the power to appoint her successor. If she should die without making a will, the whole estate passes in trust to the township of Tenstable.

"Everybody knows that Mrs. Steel was cold shouldered here 20 years ago. Everybody knows that Andrew's relations tried to make mischief between him and his wife. Well, Andrew has just punished them all in his own way. If the relations are civil enough to Mrs. Steel, one of them—one only, mark you! — may inherit everything."

That was two years ago. So far, Mrs. Steel has given no definite indication as to who was to be her successor.

All Andrew Steel's surviving relations lived in Tenstable except a second cousin, a clergyman living somewhere in the north. The clergyman was believed to have a daughter, but no one bothered to check up on this. Except Mrs. Steel.

The shower passed and she faced the reality of a wet pavement with plenty of mud about. At the corner she turned left instead of right, missed her direction, and wandered into a side street near the factory.

"Can I help you?" At her side was a pleasant man with a pleasant voice. She looked up into his friendly gray eyes, set deeply in a strong, rugged face.

"I'm trying to find Mrs. Steel's house."

"O!" There was a perceptible pause before he told her: "Turn left at the top, then the second on the right will bring you on to the main road." For a moment they studied each other and liked what they saw. "If I'm not being impertinent, I advise you not to slog all the way up there unless Mrs. Steel is expecting you."

It was not impertinent at all, the way he said it. So she smiled. "But she is expecting me. She has given me an appointment. I'm being considered for the job of companion."

"Don't. Run away. Go back home and forget it."

She had scarcely taken 20 paces when he was back at her side. "I am sorry I offended you. If you want to make inquiries about me, my name is Hanshew. Good-by."

As if the chime had reminded her, Mrs. Steel picked up the receiver of the telephone and was put thru to the factory.

"I want to speak to Mr. Hanshew."

His secretary answered. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Steel, Mr. Hanshew has been to a conference at the bank and he isn't back yet. I'm expecting him any minute and I'll tell him to ring you at once, Mrs. Steel."

"You needn't bother. It's not urgent."

"Thank you, Mrs. Steel."

The girl would tell him, of course. Mrs. Steel glanced over the valley to the factory and smiled. Then her gaze came to rest on a canary whose cage hung in the window. She spoke to it affectionately and the bird twittered back.

The citrus situation isn't good right now. Grapefruit is declining in quality as it does at this time of year, and there aren't too many oranges.

There's a bumper crop of California summer oranges for July and August consumption, but these will be coming to market in the smallest sizes on record. The limited supply of large oranges will be taken by the services. The marbles left for civilians will be of just as good quality as the big boys, tho. They'll be juicy and almost seedless, fine for summer beverages, even tho it's a lot of work extracting that juice.

Large cans of fine quality orange juice are available in many markets to take care of immediate orange juice needs, and they're point-free so far. Some of the chain stores carry 1 pound packages of frozen orange juice, which make about a pint of liquid when thawed. Grapefruit, lemon, and lime juice in frozen state also are available for summer beverage making. They taste like fresh, and if you plop them into a punch bowl in the frozen state, you'll save a good many ice cubes and that unpleasant "watering down" of a summer drink.

Cartons and food containers of all kinds are so scarce that homemakers are being asked to salvage as many as they can and turn them in for waste paper, to be used with wood pulp for new containers. Clean egg cartons are needed as well as other kinds of boxes. The egg cartons may be turned back to your grocer. Be certain to return all empty milk bottles and soft-drink bottles to dealers, too, for glass containers also are needed.

The need for waste fats is so great that fat salvage is expected to continue for a year or so after V-J day. Tin cans also should be salvaged. Many homemakers have slackened in their efforts to save these. Cut off both ends of every tin can you open [except canned milk], wash the can, remove the label, place the ends inside and flatten the can with your foot. Stack cans with the garbage, but separate from it.

We're going to have peaches to can. A record crop is beginning to come in. Prices are getting somewhat lower, but aren't within reach of canning budgets yet, by any means.

TURN IN WASTE FATS FOR POINTS AND PENNIES!

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

Kidney Bean Casserole
[Serves six]

- 1 pound dried kidney beans
- ½ pound bulk pork sausage
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 2 cups chopped apples
- 2 large onions, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1½ cups tomato juice
- 3 teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon chili powder

Wash beans, cover with fresh cold water, and soak overnight, then drain. Cook covered in large amount of boiling salted water 2 to 3 hours, or until tender. Mix remaining ingredients together thoroly. Bring to boil and add cooked, drained beans. Simmer in tightly covered pan 1½ hours.

many. He will report to the army hospital in Topeka, Kas., at the end of his leave.

Mr. and Mrs. Haven ReQua have received word from their son, Lt. [j. g.] Patrick ReQua in the South Pacific, that the wounds which he received last month aboard a PT boat were not serious and that he now is back on active duty. Lt. ReQua hopes to receive a leave sometime this summer, when he and Miss Joan Smith of Minneapolis will be married.

Comdr. Clifford T. Rodman recently has been released from the navy after more than three years service. He was attached to a carrier task force in the Pacific and received the Legion of Merit medal. He and Mrs. Rodman will spend the summer in their home in Lake Bluff.

Mrs. Paul S. Moyer's two sons are in Europe, Pvt. Albert Millet with the 15th army in Germany, and Corp. John Millet at a bomber base in England, where he recently completed an advanced radar course. Pvt. Millet has been driving a jeep and serving as interpreter for the headquarters of an infantry company.

Now back in this country after six months in a German prison camp, Lt. James Huntington Mills is enjoying a holiday with his wife at Marblehead, Mass. His sister, Mrs. Lambert A. Hopkins, has joined them in Marblehead, and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Mills, will go east later in the summer. Edwin Mills Jr. is stationed at Fort Monmouth, N. J. Lt. Comdr. Hopkins is serving in the Pacific.

Capt. and Mrs. Albert Edward Leight were surprised last week by their son, Ensign Edward Paul Leight, who arrived here from his post in San Francisco, Cal., on an unexpected 10 day leave. The Leights and their son spent the week-end in Green Lake, Wis.

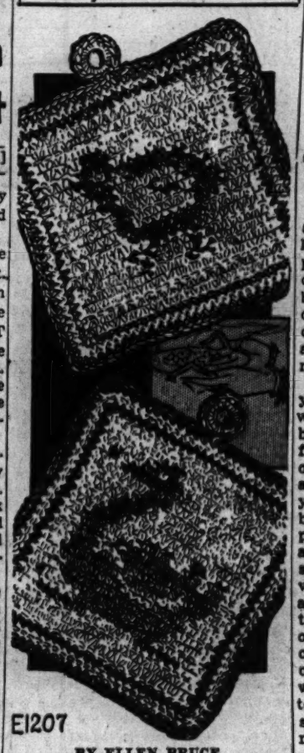
Gay Potholders



E1207

BY ELLEN BRUCE

Crocheted potholders created of four ply utility cotton are sturdy protectors and unusual since the central motifs of these pads are a swan and baby chick. The motifs are not difficult to do, because the directions contain a detailed chart.

For instructions in crocheting the swan and chick potholders, No. E-1207, send 15 CENTS in coin [wrap coin securely] to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth av., New York 1, N. Y.

Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee to Address Negro Women

Dr. Dorothy Boulding Ferebee, physician to women at Howard university in Washington, D. C., will speak here on Thursday night in the Metropolitan Community church, 4100 South Park way, under auspices of the Illinois Association of Colored Women. Her talk will be on "New Horizons for Negro Women."

Baby Articles Are Always Much Needed

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

The youngest set and their needs are much in evidence and can no longer be denied the "right of appeal." We mention two requests specifically but urge mothers whose babies have outgrown their clothing or baby furniture and vehicles to contact us for placement of such articles in the homes of the other needy families.

Mrs. M. is the mother of two young children who have been down with a long seige of whooping cough but now are recuperating. Plenty of fresh air and sunshine are the best of all tonics at this stage, and they are making good use of their back yard for daily outings. The little boy contentedly busies himself with play, but the baby girl has become a problem, since she will no longer sit still in her buggy and watch what goes on about her. Release, after her illness, has made her eager to be up and on her way. Because of innumerable household chores common to most mothers of young children, Mrs. M. finds it difficult to watch her every minute and appeals to us for a play pen which would safely afford her baby daughter a reasonable amount of adventure.

Mrs. L. has asked our assistance in providing baby clothing for the child she expects within the month. Her husband is in the army, and she cannot afford to purchase any necessities for the newcomer or clothing for her twin daughters, age 6, whose present supply is not only extremely limited but worn and outgrown. They wear dresses, size 6-7, and shoes, size 12½-13½. Mrs. L. has no means of calling for offers until the birth of her baby, but readers who are willing to mail packages will be reimbursed by this department for postage, if they so desire.

'Midsummer Nightmare'

CONCLUSION

"My dear Olivia, will you please stop spluttering and listen to me?" shouted the senator. "Look. You were married. Right?"

"No. Wrong. I thought I was married."

"Same thing."

"But it isn't at all. I can't prove it."

"Will you please get that out of your beautiful, charming head, my darling girl? You don't have to prove it. You were married. You now get a divorce. Simple. See?"

"No."

He threw out his hands, sighed and gave her an adoring smile. "Well it doesn't matter. You don't have to understand. It's true. I'm a lawyer. I know."

"But I don't ever know where the man is now . . . of if he is."

"Just relax, my dear. Don't try to think. I'll get a good, influential attorney to handle your case with a minimum of publicity. It will be a cinch."

"That's right, dearest. Take it easy."

"Then . . . all these years I could, at any time, have got a divorce, without a lot of scandal. . . ."

"We-ell. Yes. Of course some people do talk."

After a while she said, "Yes, you're right. People will talk, all right! I suppose it will all leak out, no matter how good a lawyer I have or how discreet every one is. They'll all know what a fool I've been. . . ."

"There will only need to be the barest mention of the facts in the paper, Olivia. And with your skill at evading questioning."

"Not female questioning," she groaned. "I've never even told Winnie's mother. Have you ever met Maj. Leslie? Dear, dear!"

He gave her hand a reassuring squeeze and then released it.

She stole a glance at his sober face and looked quickly away. She thought, it was too much for him. That finished everything. Even if I had known it would ruin things, I'd have had to tell. But it was suddenly cold in the room. She shivered a little.

He looked up at the motion. He was tired, too, and rather sad.

"Olivia, I've been thinking. I don't want to take advantage of you. I can't do it. You didn't know how simple it was, to get free. There must be some one . . . some other man you've loved, all these years. If you'd have known, you could have married him . . . and . . ."

"Of course."

She said unsteadily, "You really are a darling. I . . . I had to care . . . a lot . . . before I'd tell my story to any one. There has never been any one else I wanted to tell it to. If I had told it before, I'd have found out how misinformed I was long ago."

She put out her hand. After a moment he took it. "You're sure, Olivia?"

"You know, darling," he said. "I could almost be grateful to that dirty bounder for saving you for me. Olivia, isn't it worth it. Even if there is a little . . . uh publicity? Do you care who knows?"

"No," she said with spirit. "But you're the one to do the caring, if any. Do you?"

"O, no," said the senator.

But it was lost against her smooth, delicious cheek. He found her mouth. It was a long and very satisfactory kiss.

CUBS WIN, 3-1; SOX WHIP TIGERS, 6-1 AND 7-5

VICTORY IS 8TH STRAIGHT OVER REDS THIS YEAR

Get All Runs in 9th; 2d Is Rained Out

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Cincinnati, O., June 17—The Cubs, shut out on three scattered singles in the first eight innings of the first game of a scheduled double header with the Reds here this afternoon, went into the ninth trailing, 1 to 0. A few minutes later the Chicagoans were 3 to 1 victors in their eighth success over the Reds in eight games this season. The second game had gone an inning and a half when a cloudburst let loose, thus depriving the Chicagoans of a chance to lift their victory total over Cincinnati to nine straight, which was the number they won from the Reds last year in 22 attempts.

Peanuts Lowrey

Bill Nicholson opened the big ninth with a single and stopped at third on Phil Cavarretta's double to left center. The runners held on while Andy Pafko lifted a short, high fly to Dain Clay, whereupon Peanuts Lowrey ran the count to three balls and two strikes, then lined a single to left, scoring Nicholson with the tying run and Cavarretta with the winning marker. Peanuts took second on the throw to the plate and scored on Mickey Livingston's single to center.

It's Derringer's Victory

The game was a scoreless deadlock until two were out in the seventh, thanks to some nice pitching by Hank Wyse up to that point, plus errorless support. With one out in the seventh Clay singled to left and went to third on the second of Al Libke's three hits, a single to right. Gee Walker ran the count to three balls and two strikes, then fanned, but Frank McCormick stroked the first pitch for a single to right, scoring Clay.

Paul Derringer pitched the last two innings, held the Reds to a single by Libke and got credit for his eighth victory of the season.

Save Power for Finish

Perhaps you'd like to have a few words about the way the Cubs conserved their power in the first eight innings:

They wilted after a good start in the second inning. Cavarretta walked and stopped at second on Pafko's single to center. The runners advanced on Lowrey's sacrifice then Livingston fouled to Mesner. Merullo was given an intentional pass, loading the bases. Wyse popped to Miller.

Cavarretta opened the fourth with the second of the Cubs' three hits prior to the ninth, a single to right. Pafko popped to McCormick, then Cavarretta was out trying to steal second. Lowrey walked, but Livingston flied to Clay.

Nicholson made the third Chicago hit, a single to right, with one out in the sixth and reached second while Williams was throwing out Cavarretta, then Pafko bounced to Miller.

The Cubs will return home in instalments, beginning at 10:40 o'clock tonight and will continue departure thruout tomorrow. Wednesday they will open against the Pirates, who beat them three straight last week, to rise to first place, but later met trouble with the Cardinals while the Cubs were enjoying a happy visit here.

Trophies

When he'd bring, say, a basketball trophy home
She was proud, but then mothers must Think little private thoughts as well,
Like, "One more thing to dust!"
The same with his track team mementos,
Football and all the rest,
Meaning victory in one more test.

But another sort of trophy came
To this mother the other day,
It had nothing to do with the boyish games
That Eddie so loved to play;
This one meant that her son had come winning thru
Manhood's most crucial test,
That's why, of all his trophies,
She loves that Purple Heart the best!

Her Prayer

Dear God, take care of this lad of mine,

FOREMAN WINS STATE AMATEUR TITLE, 4 AND 2

Leads Sgt. Burkemo Thru Match

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Harold Foreman Jr. of Lake Shore, a muscular young man whose primary golfing talents you would associate with the bludgeoning wood clubs, yesterday proved that a big fellow can be a virtuoso with a putter also as he won the Illinois State Amateur championship for the second successive year. Large Harold brought off his encore triumph by defeating Sgt. Walter Burkemo of Evanston and the army, 4 and 2, in the 36 hole championship match at the St. Charles Country club.

Foreman, by his triumph, thus became the fourth man in the history of this C. D. G. A. competition to win two titles and the first to engineer a consecutive double since Warren Dawson ran off with the inaugural crowns of 1931 and 1932.

Champion Has 11 One-Putt Greens

If you don't believe that the 31 year old trucking executive was stroking that putter yesterday, you should have seen him record 11 one-putt greens, not to mention a handsome chip for a deuce off of a bank on the 23d hole. Eight of those one-stroke performances occurred in the morning 18, giving him a four up advantage at the luncheon intermission.

Sgt. Burkemo twice wounded veteran of the European campaign, who was playing in his first golf tournament since the Southern amateur of 1942, when he was also in the service, found his putter playing him false thruout the day. He three-putted two greens in the morning, and missed a number of important short putts in the afternoon, notably a pair of four footers on the vital 32d and the decisive 34th.

Foreman, whose persistent appearances in C. D. G. A. tourneys as a business man golfer finally were crowned with success, turned in the best complete round of the highly successful four day show with a morning medal card of 71, one under for a heavy course. Burkemo rated a solid vote of esteem for the manner in which he clung to Foreman even after being six down thru the 23d hole. He fought back to win three of the next four to make the final nine a real fight.

Foreman Goes One Under

Foreman, appearing in his third consecutive state final, fired a handsome medal round of 71, one under par, for his intermission advantage over the army veteran's 75, Harold compiled five birdies, four of them accounting for triumphs at the fifth, sixth, ninth and 15th. Burkemo could knock only two strokes off of par, once at the 10th, where he gained half and again at No. 13, where he reduced his rival's margin to two up. Foreman had a record of eight one-putt greens for the morning session.

The cards:

Foreman's Putter Hot

They halved the first four holes, Foreman one putting the 215 yard second after falling short, and chipping dead after he had overshot the green at the 560 yard fourth. Foreman then ran in putts of eight and 15 feet on the fifth and sixth, both for winning birdies. Both came down with bogey fives at the 397 yard seventh, halved the eighth, then Foreman went 3 up thru the turn with a 15 foot try for a birdie at No. 9.

He dropped one from the same distance at the 10th, Sgt. Burkemo duplicating the birdie with a six footer on the same green. Harold was trapped at the 11th and Walter was short, both going away with bogies. Burkemo hammered an eight iron four feet from the pin at the 375 yard 13th to be only two down, but he three putted the next and Foreman went 4 up with a four foot putt for a birdie at No. 15. They needed fives on the par four 16th, Foreman falling short with his approach and Burkemo chipping weakly. The sergeant retrieved a hole at the 17th, where he drove out of bounds, but regained that

WOMEN GOLFERS TEE OFF TODAY IN WESTERN OPEN

Indianapolis, Ind., June 17 (AP)—An unseasonable Indiana "blackberry winter" that last night sprayed the Highland Golf and Country club course with an inch of rain and littered it with debris loomed today among the factors most likely to determine the 1945 Women's Western Open golf champion.

A field of 137 entrants—one of the largest in the 16 year history of the event — slogged thru final practice sessions in continuous rain today and eyed a weather prediction of more of the same for tomorrow's 18 hole qualifying round.

Jameson Heads Handicap List

Mrs. Charles Denehy of Chicago, president of the Western association, said the rain had cut the field slightly below expectations.

"It's the hottest field we've ever had," she said, "and we sure would like some weather to match. But the girls won't let a little rain stop them."

Included in that field were 42 players carrying handicaps of six or under—generally considered championship caliber by the Western association. Heading the handicap list was Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., the 1942 champion.

Mrs. Mildred [Babe] Zaharias, who outdistanced a field of 105 at Park Ridge, Ill., for the 1944 title, tried the course yesterday after arriving from Philadelphia.

Miss Suggs Goes Two Over

Miss Suggs, a long hitter in her own right, was the author of the best practice round to date Friday as she posted a two over par 78 under fair weather conditions. Miss Jameson and Betty Hicks of Chicago, the reigning national amateur champion, also have been impressive in get-acquainted rounds.

Nelson's 269 Wins Eastern Golf Tourney

Philadelphia, Pa., June 17 (AP)—Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., shot what he termed "the hottest round of golf ever played" today to win first money in the Philadelphia $17,500 Open with a closing round of 63.

That gave him 269 for the 72 holes, the P. G. A. record of six consecutive tournament triumphs, shaved three strokes off the Lanerch club course record and made him a money winner in each of his last 87 tourneys.

Nelson Putts for Eagles

Nelson shot two under par golf thru the first 12 holes today, but when informed at the 12th green that McSpaden, who with Bulla had started the day with a one stroke lead, had scored an eagle on the seventh, he pulled his wedge out of the bag.

The club, a deep faced niblick and called "my half-Nelson because I can always strangle the opposition with it," had him putting for eagles on the 13th, 15th and 18th holes.

Furgol Leads Amateurs

Nelson, who won $47,600 in war bonds last year, hiked his earnings for the present season to $27,948 with $3,333.33 [maturity value of the bonds] won in this meet, played for the benefit of the pro golfers' rehabilitation fund.

Jimmy Hines, Chicago veteran who paced the field the first two days, finished with 284 and in a tie with Ky Laffoon, another Chicago veteran. Just before stepping onto the first tee, Hines received word that his soldier son was in a Boston hospital. It was the first word from Jimmy Jr. since his capture by the Germans in Italy 15 months ago.

BROOKLYN DEALS COOPER 1ST LOSS AND TAKES LEAD

Boston, Mass., June 17 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers went into first place in the National league today by winning the first game of a doubleheader, 9 to 6, handing Mort Cooper his first defeat of the season.

The second game was halted by the Massachusetts Sunday law in the Brooklyn half of the eighth inning with one out, a man on base and Braves leading, 4 to 1. It will be completed in August when the Dodgers come here on their next trip.

Cooper was behind, 7 to 4, and had yielded nine hits in the six innings he worked in the first game. Hal Gregg, who aided his cause by hitting a homer, was credited with his ninth victory of the season tho he was relieved in the eighth after handing out four successive passes after the first batter singled.

HAYNES' ANKLE BROKEN DURING SECOND GAME

Lee Yields Six Hits in First Contest

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

James Dykes' White Sox, showing no bruises as the result of the one-two punch given them the day previous by Detroit's Tigers, returned the compliment yesterday in the same one-two fashion before 21,864 of their Comiskey park constituents. The unpredictable Chicago boys slapped the first placers with 6 to 1 and 7 to 5 beatings but at the cost of the services for at least two months of Joe Haynes who suffered a compound fracture and a dislocation of the right ankle.

Following X-ray examinations at Mercy hospital where Haynes was taken after the accident, Dr. John D. Claridge, White Sox physician said: "Haynes will be lost to the White Sox for a minimum of eight weeks. He suffered a compound fracture and dislocation which extends two and one-half to three inches laterally and backward. It is one of the most severe cases I ever have seen. We naturally will do everything we can to speed his recovery, but I do not possibly see how he can be of any further service to the White Sox within eight weeks."

Fifth Victory a Costly One

The first game was a mere romp for that 37 year old youngster named Thornton Lee who pitched only misery to the pacemakers while progressing toward his season's eighth victory. He yielded only six hits, so spaced that after the second inning the Tigers didn't see what the country looked like beyond first base. Meanwhile, the Sox had rendered a sound thumping to both Forrest Orrell and Walter Wilson, Lee having a hand in this with two hits.

Haynes succeeded in demonstrating in the second game that he, too, could hit and it proved his undoing. After his second single he scooted from first to third in the fifth inning on another hit, jamming his right leg into the bag when he attempted to slide. During his stay on the mound, which was long enough to entitle him to credit for his fifth victory, Haynes yielded only one hit.

The Sox had no trouble piling up a fat lead for Haynes because the Tigers were sort of careless both about their pitching and fielding. Three passes off Leslie Mueller were turned into runs in the second inning. Then they knocked him out in the fifth, with another three run barrage, the other run coming home in the sixth at the expense of Zeb Eaton. And this was ample altho there was a slight flurry in the ninth when the Tigers made it so unpleasant for Orval Grove that Earl Caldwell had to come to his assistance.

Sox Make Orrell Unhappy

Indications that the Sox planned to make Orrell's day a short one came in the opening inning of the first game. Moses and Dickshot singled, the former scoring. They slapped him closer to the exit in the third when two more scored on a single by Lee, a double by Moses, and a single by Curtright. Meanwhile, the Tigers had picked up their run off Lee on singles by York, Cramer, and Maier.

Cuccinello led off with a single in the fourth and it wasn't long before the hapless Orrell was out of work and out of sight. Schalk sacrificed and Michaels singled to score old man Tony. After Tresh had been thrown out, Lee singled for the second time and Michaels counted. Outlaw's throw in was badly aimed and Lee rode to second on the error, thus being within scoring range when Moses greeted Rescuer Wilson with a single. During the rest of the journey the Sox subsisted on two hits.

Brisk Attack Routs Mueller

Mueller slipped passes to Dickshot and Cuccinello to start the second game and the Sox quickly

PHILS OUTSLUG GIANTS, 11 TO 9; WIN 2D, 6 TO 2

Bill Voiselle Suffers 6th Straight Defeat

New York, June 17 (AP)—The last place Philadelphia Phillies won both games of today's double header from the faltering New York Giants, 11 to 9 and 6 to 2, to drop the Giants into a second place tie with Pittsburgh. Jimmy Wasdell hit a home run in each game to lead the Phillies' offensive. Bill Voiselle of the Giants suffered his sixth straight loss in the second game after winning his first eight games.

CARDS BEAT PIRATES TWICE

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 17 (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals held the Pittsburgh Pirates to 10 hits today as they won both games of a double header, 7 to 0 and 6 to 2, before the season's record crowd of 32,396.

The double loss tumbled the Pirates out of first place in the National league. Ken Burkhardt limited them to five hits in the first game and Ted Wilks yielded a similar number in the second.

ATHLETICS LOSE FIRST, 7-1; BEAT YANKS IN 2D, 4-2

Philadelphia, Pa., June 17 (AP)—Russ Christopher, scattering eight hits, won his 11th game of the season in the second contest of a double header, 4 to 2, today to give the Philadelphia Athletics an even split with the New York Yankees. The Yankees won the first, 7 to 1. The biggest Philadelphia crowd of the season, 34,716, watched the two games.

The Yankees' first game victory was their only triumph of the four game series here. Joe McCarthy's team clubbed three A's pitchers for 14 hits, starting with Bob Newsom and following up on Charley Gassaway and Lou Knerr. Floyd Bevens held the A's to seven hits.

Christopher aided his own cause by making two singles, one of which helped the A's scoring against Joe Page. Herschel Martin got a home run off Christopher in the first inning of the second game, but after that the Athletics' star held the Yankees at big until the eighth when they pushed across their second run.

RED SOX WIN TWO

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—Boston's pitching was too good for Washington's Senators today and the Red Sox swept a double header, 2 to 1 and 7 to 1.

Emmitt O'Neill converted a two run rally in the sixth inning into his fourth win of the season in a duel with Dutch Leonard in the first game.

NEWS OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE

TENANT LOSSES IN SOUTHWEST LOOP EXPECTED

Pre-War Shifting to North Cited

Altho enjoying high war time occupancy, the southwestern loop commercial area is faced with renewed loss of tenants when emergency federal government bureaus begin to curtail activities, real estate men said yesterday.

A new migration from the area would mark a resumption of the pre-war trend when the district lost heavily to other areas, particularly the near north side.

The pre-war trend was caused by several factors. These included the building of the Merchandise Mart with 4 million square feet of floor space on the near north side, the decision of the ready-to-wear industry manufacturers to deal directly with wholesalers, putting about 600 jobbers out of business, and the depression.

Some Half Century Old

"In some parts of the south and west sections of the loop are buildings a half century or more old which once brought good rentals, but on which not a dollar has been spent in years," said Arthur Rubloff of Arthur Rubloff & Co., real estate operator. "The tenants gradually are moving northward.

"New buildings and new tenants can make a district. That has happened on the near north side where modern, clean, well lighted, and attractive space was made available."

Realtors said that land on Adams st., west of Wells st., which several years ago sold for $50 a square foot, at present would not bring more than $10 or $12 a square foot.

The 18 story Fisher building at the northeast corner of Dearborn and Van Buren sts., built in 1898, was given as an example. Rentals in the building climbed to $2.50 and $2.75 a square foot in the late 1920s. Prices tumbled in the depression years, never have recovered, and now average about $1.50 a square foot.

Examples Are Cited

This condition was reflected in the 22 story Transportation building at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Harrison sts. Rentals average about $1.25 per square foot, with some as low as $1. Space in the Monadnock building rents at an average of $1.60 a square foot, compared with about $2.75 in the late 1920s.

The 16 story Insurance Center at the northwest corner of Wells and Van Buren sts., built in 1928 at a reported cost of 1 million dollars for land and building, would not be worth much more than a third of that figure at present, based on its income return, real estate men said. Rentals which once were about $2.50 a square foot average about $1.25.

The near north side office building situation, where the approximately 100 per cent occupancy is commercial and almost none is governmental, is more satisfactory from the owners' standpoint than any part of the loop commercial district, real estate brokers said.

Bridge Aids Near North Side

The development of Michigan av. north of the river into an office building and shopping thorofare has stemmed directly from the widening and modernizing of what formerly was dead-end Pine st., and the building of the Michigan av. bridge, it was explained. This development has come in the 25 years since the opening of the bridge.

The accompanying chart, which shows the change in land values per front foot for typical periods, embraces selected areas of the downtown district and the near north side. Figures for State st. include the thorofare between Harrison and Lake sts.; Michigan av. [South] from Roosevelt rd. to Washington st.; office buildings [loop] on Dearborn and Clark sts. between Jackson blvd. and Randolph st.; Wabash av. between Harrison and Lake sts.; Michigan av. [north] from Randolph st. to Chicago av.; west loop commercial between Wells st. and the river and from Van Buren st. to Lake st.; south loop commercial from Van Buren st. to Taylor st. and between the river and State st.; and near north side commercial from Kinzie st. to Chicago av. and from Rush st. to the north branch of the river.

Basis of Valuations

Valuations used are Olcott's blue book estimates which are based on surveys, interviews with dealers, and actual sales, as well as asking prices and rentals in the various districts. Occupancy and collections also are considered.

Real estate men said that generally valuations for 1945 reflect more the real value of the properties than the 1940 figures, which they said were not represented as low as they should have been because of the lack of transactions in the inactive market at that time. Since then increased transactions have been made that more adequately reflect the trend, they explained.

MASONITE PATENTS

Masonite has manufactured hardboard since 1926 and its present strong trade position and development of improved manufacturing techniques are regarded as an important offset to the recent expiration of its original patents.

The generic patent relating to hardboard, covering the use of lignin as a cement for wood fibers, expired last March. The patent relating to the production of wood fiber by explosion with high pressure steam ran out in 1943. Important subsequent patents relating to hardboard, apparatus, and manufacturing processes expire at various dates from 1947 to 1957.

Hardboard, a homogenous dense fiber board possessing high tensile strength, is used in building and in numerous industrial products. The company also makes structural insulation board and miscellaneous building materials.

Masonite owns large timber land holdings near its Laurel, Miss., plant. A few small oil wells and dry holes have been drilled on its land. The management has expressed the belief that further extensive exploration would be necessary to determine the value of its mineral rights.

In the nine months ended last May, net earnings were equal to $1.36 per common share. In the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, the share profit was $1.69. In earlier years, on a smaller number of shares, it was: 1943, $2.04; 1942, $2.71; 1941, $3.56; 1940, $2.91; 1939, $1.99. Dividends are 25 cents quarterly, supplemented in some years by extras.

IDLE INSURANCE FUND IN ILLINOIS TOPS ½ BILLION

Robert L. Gordon, state director of labor, said yesterday that Illinois' unemployment compensation trust fund contains more than one-half billion dollars.

"Since December, 1943, interest on the fund has been sufficient to meet monthly unemployment benefit payments," he said. "Under provisions of the Illinois unemployment compensation law, this money can be used only to pay benefits to involuntarily unemployed workers."

He said most war workers thrown out of work by closing of war plants or otherwise will be eligible for maximum benefits of $20 a week from the fund.

BEECH, CESSNA AIR BOARDS ACT TO MERGE FIRMS

New York, June 17 [Special]—Directors of both Beech Aircraft corporation and Cessna Aircraft company have agreed to recommend to their stockholders a merger and consolidation of the two companies thru the issuance of one new Beech share for each three outstanding Cessna shares, the companies announced today.

Walter H. Beech, president of Beech Aircraft, and Clyde Cessna, founder of Cessna Aircraft, were associated in the Travel-Air company in its earliest stages. Dwane Wallace, president, and Dwight Wallace, executive vice president and treasurer of Cessna, are nephews of Cessna, from whom they purchased control of the company in 1934. Dwane Wallace was associated with Beech in 1933 and 1934 as a designing engineer.

TERMS FOR SALE OF WAR SURPLUS IN AFRICA FIXED

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—The United States announced today an agreement with the provisional government of France covering the sale of army and navy surplus material in French North Africa.

Among other things, the agreement provides that any material sold in Morocco, Algeria, and Tunisia to the French government or private citizens will be paid for in dollars and payment made within 30 days.

ORDER DEALERS TO REPORT ALL SHOES IN STOCK

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—The OPA today called for a general inventory of dealers' stocks of both rationed and nonrationed shoes as of the close of business July 31.

Inventory reports have been required periodically in the past, but were limited to rationed shoes. OPA said the new count will give a more realistic report on footwear supplies "particularly in view of the emphasis now being placed on nonrationed shoes."

RFC Offers Surplus Air Compressors for Sale

Washington, D. C., June 17 (AP)—The Reconstruction Finance corporation today offered for sale 1,800 surplus air compressors of 7½ horsepower or less. Some are driven by gasoline engine and some by electricity, both portable and stationary models. Some have been used and are in need of repairs. They will be on sale thru June 30 thru RFC offices in Atlanta, Kansas City, Mo., New York, and Charlotte, N. C.

DOLLAR VALUE RETENTION BY CANADA LIKELY

Shift Held Unwise During War

BY PHILIP HAMPSON

Economic and political considerations may cause maintenance, for the time being, of the present rate of the Canadian dollar at approximately 90 American cents. Chicago bankers said yesterday.

The bankers considered it unlikely that any step would be taken to put the Canadian dollar on a parity with the American dollar, altho there may be good reason for so doing, at least until after world money arrangements have been completed. Recent London reports have mentioned the possibility of revaluing the Canadian dollar.

Waits on Bretton Woods

"Based on my conversations with Canadian bankers I see no possibility of putting the Canadian and American dollars on a parity until after Bretton Woods pacts have been signed, sealed and delivered," one banker said. "Further, we have a major war on our hands and tinkering now with monetary values would upset a great many financial arrangements."

Reasons given for the present strong position of the Canadian dollar which would justify putting it on a parity with the American dollar:

1. Comparatively sound financing of the Canadian war drive in which a large part of costs was met from taxes.

2. Successful operation of the controls over wholesale and retail prices and over wages. This has made it possible to keep the cost of living from rising much so that relatively the Canadian dollar will buy more in Canada than will the American dollar in the United States.

Trade Balance Favorable

3. Sale by Canada of far more goods to foreign nations than it has purchased abroad, giving Canada a more favorable trade balance, which means it has more currency of foreign nations than they have of Canadian.

Canada during the war has sold vast quantities of raw or semi-raw materials, including pulp, newsprint, nickel, asbestos, and other items to other countries including the United States. The exporters wish the present rate retained because it gives the United States an incentive to buy goods in Canada. Canadian importers wish parity because under the present rate they must pay a premium for American goods.

The present $1.10 price of the American dollar acts as an additional tariff wall in Canada, encouraging Canadians to buy within their own country.

Canada's Dollar Balance Large

Canadians have accumulated a vast American dollar balance as a result of large war purchases in Canada. One banker estimated this balance at 1 billion dollars. He explained that every time a Canadian company is credited with $100 in American dollars it obtains from the Bank of Canada thru the exchange control $110 in Canadian dollars. Thus, putting the Canadian dollar on a parity with the American dollar would lop 100 millions off the billion, an action which it was said would stir up a political hornet's nest.

Unexplained Detroit Steel Plant Strike Is Called Off

Detroit, Mich., June 17 (AP)—The Great Lakes Steel company strike, in which 6,000 to 7,000 men had been idle since late Friday, was called off today by officers of local 1299, CIO United Steel Workers, but there was still no public explanation for the walkout. A union spokesman said work would be resumed at midnight.

Chicago Area Arms Cutbacks Large, but Orders Continue

Contract cutbacks and cancellations approximating 450 million dollars have been made in the Chicago ordnance district since V-E day, Col. John Slezak, district chief, said yesterday.

The district has continued to place sizable amounts of new business with its contractors, he said. Contracts let last month exceeded 145 million dollars, 169 million under April levels.

Cutbacks May Contine

"The ordnance department still is calling upon private industry in this area to produce many critical items which are urgently needed by our troops in the South Pacific," he warned. "The defeat of Germany in no way lessens responsibility in this regard and we must continue to place any demands for material for use against Japan as number one on the nation's production list."

The Chicago ordnance district covers northern Illinois and Indiana, the northern peninsula of Michigan, and Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and North and South Dakota.

May Output Down 7 Million

District contractors last month produced $146,747,000 worth of fighting equipment, he said, a decline of only $7,911,000 from April volume. The major share of cutbacks and terminations ordered since May 8 will not show their full effect on district output until later this summer.

Illustrating, Slezak said the 2½ ton truck production at the Studebaker corporation plant is not scheduled to end until July 31; nor does medium tank production at the Pressed Steel Car company plant end until June 30.

A break-down of district terminations showed production cuts in the ammunition branch aggregated 115 million dollars; artillery, 35 million, and tank-automotive, 300 million. Small arms terminations were termed "negligible."

PEOPLE AND EVENTS

Col. Nelson S. Talbott has been named administrative assistant to the chief of engineering and procurement, air technical service command, and Col. Robert L. Finkenstaedt of Chicago as commanding officer of the newly formed central district, A. T. S. C., with headquarters in Chicago. Gen. Lester T. Miller, acting director of A. T. S. C., Wright field, O., announced. The new district comprises the former central district — Michigan, Ohio, and Canada — and the midcentral district—Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Iowa and the St. Louis region.

'Liberated' Pup

First Sgt. Harold Jacobus and pup, Padget, which he brought from Germany. [TRIBUNE Photo]

First Sgt. Harold Jacobus of 512 Mower av., Rockford, arrived in Chicago yesterday en route to his home accompanied by a miniature Schnauzer pup, Padget, which he brought with him from Germany as a gift for his son, Alan, 22 months old. Jacobus, a soldier for 10 years, has been overseas for 18 months. He found the pup in Prosselsheim, Germany, three months ago.
